Victor Rizzolo of Manville, a retired Superior Court judge, served as Grand Marshal of the Somerville Memorial Day Parade. A veteran of World War II, Rizzolo shares stories of ordinary men doing acts of extraordinary heroism during the heat of battle.

Honoring brothers in arms

WWII veteran talks about the 'ordinary' heroes

By JIM WHITE

SOMERVILLE — The words could be heard down High Street, coming from an unidentified parade organizer looking on from the reviewing stand.

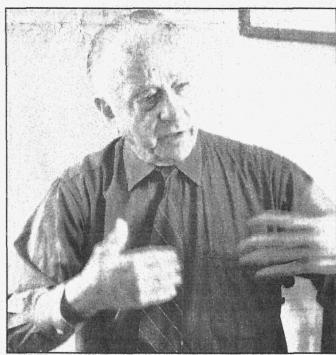

"Order in the court! Order in the court! Here comes the judge!"

Victor Rizzolo of Manville, a retired Superior Court judge, was this year's Grand Marshal of the Somerville Memorial Day Parade. Prior to the 9 a.m. start, the 81-yearold began his day Monday inside his quaint home talking about his experiences some 60 years after he helped to topple the German war machine.

And though Rizzolo said he never thought of himself as a member of the "greatest generation," his collection of medals and a noticeable limp suggest he knows firsthand what men and women of the World War II era went through to garner such a reputation.

"We never thought of ourselves as that," he said. "All gen-

Edison school honors the flag

EDISON — James Madison Primary School will hold its 18th annual Flag Day program 1:30 p.m. June 14.

The program was begun in memory of Paul J. Stolte, who was a custodian at the school and an active member of American Legion Post 324 and Auxiliary Unit 324.

An American flag, which was donated by the Stolte family, will be displayed as the background for the presentations made by the first graders.

Through songs and narrations, they explain how the American flag came to be, how it has changed through the years, and how this symbol of our country stands for courage, bravery, liberty, and freedom.

This year the school will be presented with a flag sent from Iraq by Omar Valentine, a serviceman stationed there, to his daughter Samantha, currently in second grade.

Valentine had the flag signed by some of the men in his platoon. The school's PTA had the flag framed.

After the presentation, the flag will be hung on the wall in the entrance to the school. Every time staff, students or visitors walk through the halls of James Madison Primary School, they will be reminded of the men and women serving overseas.

The second grade classes participated in an essay contest titled "What the American Flag Means to Me."

The American Legion post selects the most outstanding essays and the children are presented with a cash award. The winners will not be known to the students until the day of the Flag Day pro-

College graduates record-size class

EDISON — Representing the largest class in the history of Middlesex County College, Jeffrey Philip Muirhead, 54, of Parlin, an honors graduate in Business, Computer Science and Engineering Technologies, delivered the student address at the 38th annual graduation exercises, held May 26, telling of the educational challenges that gave him the confidence "to become someone I didn't know I could be.'

"During my oldest daughter's senior year in high school, I took her to visit several college campuses, Murihead said. "It gave me the idea that if I went back to school, she and I could finish at the same time and have a double graduation. My calculations were somewhat off. She graduated in four years with a B.S. Degree in Geology and here I am talking to you seven years after I began.

More than 475 of the 1,051 members of the class of 2005 participated in the exercises, held in the Physical Education Center, representing the 199 graduates of August 2004, 290 of January 2005 and 537 of the most recent class.

Twenty four members of the Class of 2005, all students of Radiography Education, will be officially graduated in August after the completion of their intern practicum. In addition, several students have completed the requirements for more than one degree or certificate during this academic year.

Rizzolo enlisted in the Army in June of 1943 after graduating from Barringer High School in Newark.

"My parents said 'If you don't go in you're gonna be drafted," he recalled.

Following basic training Rizzolo was sent to Texas A&M University for the Army Strategic Service Training Program.

"They didn't know how long the war was gonna last. They needed officers," he said. "But they didn't need scholars, they needed guys in foxholes," he said, adding his stay in Texas was short and before he knew it he was in France fighting the Germans as a scout for the 103rd Infantry Division.

As a scout, Rizzolo would head out about 50 yards ahead of his platoon trying to locate the enemy.

"They would fight the hell out of us during the day, then disappear at night," he said.

On Dec. 1, 1944, while helping to kick the Germans out of Alsace-Lorraine, France, Rizzolo was hit by something in the left knee - what has become a constant reminder of around it. It remains an open, draining wound today.

Whatever hit his knee shattered it and all the bones

"I've never been able to bend it since. It never really healed," he said, adding he still must clean it and keep it bandaged.

"Small arms fire? I don't know what it was," he said. "I stepped over this hill, maybe about 25 feet going down through the woods when I went down. I knew I was hit,"

He said it was his fellow scout Ed Reilly from Ohio who cleaned and bandaged him before hiding him in a hole until the fighting was over.

Rizzolo said Reilly, who has since moved to Montana, called him out of the blue a few years ago and the two have rekindled their friendship.

"He killed six Germans in one day, that guy," Rizzolo said, bragging about his friend.

"I'm a very blessed man to come back," he said. "A lot of guys didn't make it back."

That included his cousin, Daniel, who enlisted alongside him and served with the Army's 104th. He was killed a week after Rizzolo was wounded.

"It was a very bad time for our family," he said.

Upon his return to the states, Rizzolo began working at his father's law firm.

After his father's death, he went on to serve as a municipal court judge in Hillsborough, Millstone, Bridgewater and Raritan. He said in 1969 he made the decision to allow the construction of Bridgewater Commons Mall, a

In 1970 he became a Superior Court judge at the historic Somerset County Courthouse in Somerville, serving for five years before starting his own practice, Rizzolo and Rizzolo, which he runs with his son Stanley. He said his daughter Vicky is a lawyer in Minnesota, and his other son, Steven, is a neurosurgeon in Montana. Inside his West High Street office, Rizzolo displays all his military awards, including a Purple Heart and Bronze Star among numerous World War II campaign medals.

"It was a much simpler world back then," he said of his past. "But with all the changes we are still a great nation. We stand for things that are right. We never anticipate crisis, like when the Sputnik went up, but we won the space war. That's our nation. We don't start things, we finish them.'

Later Monday morning, Rizzolo led the parade through the streets of Somerville from the shotgun position inside Neva Rae Fox's red Volkswagen Cabrio convertible. His friend, Antoinette Banaskiewicz, of Bridgewater, waved to onlookers from the back seat.

"This is a real community thing," said Fox, a borough resident who has volunteered to chauffeur Grand Marshals for the last 10 years. "I hope we never lose it."

Junk food faces suspension

The much-maligned Twinkee had better watch out.

It, and other legendary junk food icons, has a price on its head.

And, if state legislators have their way, the penalty will be a permanent ban on junk food in public elementary and middle schools.

Is this another example of government having to regulate common sense? Kind of like seat belt laws and a ban on hand-held cell phones while driving. Or is it a stand against offering kids yet another avenue to fill up with junk rather than something at least closely resembling food?

Just recently the Senate's Education Committee approved the language of a bill banning junk food from being sold in vending machines at public elementary and middle schools until 30 minutes after school closes for the day. The bill has been sent to the full Senate for consideration.

Assemblyman Herb Conaway, D., Burlington, a doctor who cosponsored a similar measure passed by the Assembly, said in a press conference: "The most effective way to prevent obesity in our children is to teach them the right way to eat."

The New Jersey Education Association had lobbied for the legislation.

According to the American Obesity Association, about 15.5 percent of adolescents (ages 12 to 19) and 15.3 percent of children (ages 6 to 11) are obese. That's up from 7 percent of children between 1976 and 1980 and 5 percent of adolescents during the same period.

In response to the proposal, Robert Earl, senior director for nutrition policy at the Food Products Association, a food and beverage industry trade association, said the bill and similar measures being considered in other states will not improve children's health.

He's right. And he's wrong.

Yes, simply banning junk food from school won't stop kids from bringing junk food with them, or from eating it at home. But the bill isn't aimed necessarily at stopping kids; it is meant to be part of the way to teach kids not to eat junk.

Applying the Food Product Association's logic, cigarette vending machines could be put in school cafeteria's throughout Somerset County and not change the number of kids who want to smoke because kids can buy cigarettes elsewhere too.

The logic simply doesn't work.

Kids choose to smoke — or not smoke — based on what they have learned and from peer pressure. They learn what to eat the same way. And while smoking has a stigma attached to it, eating junk food does not. Yet both are leading reasons why people die each year.

According to the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, childhood obesity puts people at higher risk of heart disease, diabetes and some cancers later in life.

It's up to parents and educators to help give kids the right facts to make an informed decision. In the same way telling kids not to smoke and then allowing them to buy Marlboro Lights in the school cafeteria is a ludicrous idea, so too is explaining about good nutrition while a vending machine outside the classroom is filled with M&Ms and Wise potato chips. Parents, educators and kids themselves ultimately have to make the decision on what they eat and don't eat — but keeping junk food out of the schools helps making a good choice about nutrition that much easier.

Heart disease knows no gender

By BARBARA BUONO

In the world of medical research men and women are not the same. Most of us are aware that the two sexes tend to suffer from different diseases. It is also increasingly clear that women do not always benefit from the treatments that work for men.

Heart disease, stroke, diabetes and depression all affect the sexes differently.

The Divisions of Preventive Medicine, a consortium of some of the nations leading medical institutions, have placed a new emphasis on gender-specific research. One prominent result is that aspirin lowers stroke risk in women but does not afford the same protection as it does for men, where it reduces risk of heart attack. The aspirin study underscores the value of conducting clinical studies that determine how illnesses and treatments affect women and men differently.

The Institute of Medicine, a component of the National Academy of Sciences, released an extensive report regarding the influence gender has on human health. The report explores the unique responses men and women have to medications and diseases. They conclude that while progress has been made to include women in clinical studies, in order for the research to be truly valuable, the actual differences between the genders must be investigated and understood as well.

We know that heart disease is the leading cause of death in women, exceeding even breast cancer. However women with heart disease have not been diagnosed as early as they might have been because the symptoms they exhibit are different than the typical symptoms seen in men. In addition, New Jersey has the highest rate of women suffering from AIDS in the nation and a higher than average rate of breast cancer.

In light of these facts, the State Legislature, in 2003, created a special office to focus on these crucial health concerns. The New Jersey Office on Women's Health was created with a mandate to promote the prevention and early detection of diseases in women. It was to fund research efforts, as well as provide information and outreach services. Unfortunately, although the office was assigned a variety of additional responsibilities, it never received any state funding which would have enabled it to fulfill its laudable mission.

New Jersey is currently in the throes of solving an enormous budget deficit. However, recent negotiations indicate there is promise of Horizon Blue Cross converting from a not-for-profit to a for-profit entity. The mechanism employed would create a large pool of funding dedicated to health care initiatives. It is my sincere hope that my colleagues will join me and see the wisdom of dedicating some of this funding to increase our evolving knowledge about how disease uniquely affects women.

The Office of Women's Health can be a vehicle enabling New Jersey to truly improve the health and longevity of our mothers, our daughters, our spouses, our friends.

Sen. Barbara Buono, D-18th, serves East Brunswick, Edison, Metuchen, South River, Helmetta, Spotswood and South Plainfield.

Letters to the Editor

Case is made for remaining active

To The Editor:

Times change. So it should be no surprise to environmental activists that methods and messages must change with them sages must change with them. For example, the "war on terror" seems to imply a doomsday conflagration just around the corner. By contrast, global warming is no less deadly, but it's gradual. Its worst impacts may be decades into the future and thus are easy to ignore in the face of more immediate threats.

So what will convince the global public that global climate change is real and serious and warrants immediate attention?

That's the question raised by a conference hosted in January by Middlebury College in Vermont. "What Works? New Strategies for a Melting Planet" brought together everyone from well-known environmentalists and scientists to college students to discuss strategies for creating a "sense of urgency among the public."

At the conference, participants welcomed the chance to brainstorm and came up with a bunch of great ideas.

Some groups used humor, such as the "Flat Earth Award," founded to "highlight the denial of global warming by prominent public figures."

After all, plenty of public figures once denied the earth was round, even in the face of overwhelming scientific evidence. You still have time to vote for one of three candidates at http://flatearthaward.org.

Other traditional strategies were discussed, including staging a protest at the Ford Motor Company headquarters in Detroit over their cars, which have the lowest gas mileage of the big American automakers.

The organizers hope largescale, peaceful demonstrations will raise the public's awareness of the contribution auto emissions make to global warming, and spur the automakers into competing to see who can be cleanest.

In a very immediate sense, auto emissions cause air pollution, which affects our health today. Rising rates of asthma among children are partly blamed on high doses of unclean air. While it may seem that the public is not paying enough attention to air pollution or climate change issues, there are some very real and creative solutions available right now in New Jersey to decrease fossil fuel pollution and curb greenhouse emis-

For example, SmartStart Schools is a special program designed to help New Jersey's school districts build energyefficient buildings. In 2003 alone, schools, homeowners, municipalities and businesses across the State received $30 million from the New Jersey Clean Energy Program in renewable energy grants and rebates that reduced the upfront costs of clean energy projects such as solar installation. When you drive in a residential neighborhood in New Jersey, pay close attention. You just might spot a house with solar panels on its roof and it's likely the homeowner got a 60 percent rebate on installation costs from the state.

And let's not forget, armchair activism does still work. Environmental Defense just announced a major victory for clean air and our collective health. On March 10, the U.S. EPA signed into action the Clean Air Interstate Rule (CAIR), resulting in the biggest cut in unhealthy smog- and soot-forming pollution from power plants in a decade, bringing relief to children, the elderly and asthma suffers. Environmental Defense credits the victory in part to 40,000 of its members and activists who wrote to Congress supporting

So when concerned citizens ask, "What can we do?," a question not just for the environmental movement, but a question for all of us, the answer is "A lot!"

"A lot!"

To learn more about what you can do to clean up the environment, visit New Jersey's Clean Energy Program at www.njcleanenergy.com or call (877) 786-5278. And check out Environmental Defense at

Airport activities not illegal, despite claims

To The Editor:

If one were to read the latest "petition" to the Bedminster Township Committee circulated by the BBCCC group opposing the life-saving medevac helicopter operated by the New Jersey State Police at Somerset Airport, one might think that activities like flight training, glider flying and helicopter operations are prohibited by some law, regulation or ordinance.

You would be wrong.

Not one of the activities that BBBCCC claims are illegal is prohibited by any federal, state, or local law, regulation or ordinance. Not that I am very surprised. Neither the BBBCCC, nor the people who finance its activities, place much of premium on accuracv.

For example, the BBBCCC "petition" quotes Assembly Bill A.967 in an attempt to portray small airports as health hazards. Had the BBBCCC members done any research at all, they would know that the research was about a large international jetport in Europe. No study has ever shown that any health hazards result from small general aviation airports.

From the list of activities that BBBCCC now claims are illegal, it seems clear that the true agenda of the group is not to oppose helicopter operations, but to totally close down the airport.

To give the BBBCCC the benefit of the doubt, I emailed the organization and asked for the references supporting their charges. I received no response. The only reasonably conclusion is that the BBBCCC continues to fabricate information, as did its predecessor group, the BBBRRR, in a desperate attempt to pursue a failed agenda.

Have they, and their supporters, no shame?

DOT must consider the access application before development of the Walgreens site begins.

Golfers tee off for OPSHBX

The 5th annual Champagne Open Charity Golf Tournament tees off Tuesday, June 7, at Beaver Brook Country Club in Annandale, and with the help of promoter Tony D'Angelo and Frank Valanzola, vice president of Morgan Stanley at the Main Street Somerville office, the event promises to be the biggest yet for Operation Shoebox New Jersey 2005, with 150 golfers expected on hand.

OPSHBX will get a piece of each entry fee - $800 for a foursome - and a portion of each hole sponsorship at $250 each. For non-golfers, dinner only is $60; capacity in the country club dining room is 175, and there are just a few seats avail-

Former Saturday Night Live comic Joe Piscopo will be on hand, as will Somerset Patriots manager Sparky Lyle and Miss New Jersey USA 2002 Robin Williams and Miss New Jersey USA 2004 Jenaye Ingram.

There will be a hole-in-one contest for a chance to win a Porsche Boxter, courtesy of Ray Catena, as well as raffle gifts. Proceeds will be shared by OPSHBX and the American Heart Association.

Shotgun start is 1 p.m. Further information is available on the website at www.champagneopen.com or call (973) 514-5219.

Classic Cruizers

Hats off to the Classic Cruizers, who welcomed the volunteers of Operation Shoebox New Jersey 2005 last Friday to their weekly vintage, classic and hot rod car show, held downtown Somerville every Friday night through Labor Day weekend.

More thanks go to the staff of WMTR 1170 AM, especially DJ Gus Gascoigne, aka The Golden Gup, who plugged OPSHBX several times during the live broadcast.

The "Gup" will also be on hand June 24, July 15, July 22, July 29, Aug. 19 and Aug. 26 broadcasting live.

Despite a cloudburst that sent the crowd scattering for cover, the kick-off was a huge success for the Cruizers, with more than 200 cars parked on Main Street.

Several dozen people walking by the OPSHBX table in front of the Reform Church dropped contributions into the OPSH-BX money jug, and several bought OPSHBX t-shirts, too. The tally by night's end was

But the best story of the night was the woman who drove down to Somerville from Morristown after hearing about OPSHBX on the broadcast. She stopped off at a mall and bought a bagful of tube socks for the soldiers.

We're pleased to have become a part of this Friday night classic, sponsored by the Fullerton Auto Group on Route 22 in Somerville. We'll be on West Main Street in the center of town with a booth to pass out information about OPSHBX every Friday night, as well as collect donations of grocery items and financial contributions to help defray the costs of shipping.

Joe Ciulla, a teacher at Bedwell Elementary School in Bernardsville supervised a group of hand-picked students last week who help load the OPSHBX van with supplies collected at the school over the past two weeks.

Ciulla, who serves as the school's community service coordinator, organized the twoweek supply drive, which also included a card and letter-writing campaign. Each of the students who wrote a card or letter to the troops received a voucher good for one free ticket to a Somerset Patriots game this year.

Special thanks go out to Ciulla's colleague, Jean Cahouet who assisted in the drive, and teacher's aide Cindy Matero, who constructed a large mailbox to receive all the letters written by the students. We're using it at The Chronicle to deposit other letters that come in from students at other schools before sorting them and placing them in the boxes that get shipped to the soldiers and Marines in Iraq.

Kelsey Charity Run

OPSHBX has also joined with the organizers of the Kelsey Charity Run, a Bridgewater motorcycle event that continues to grow each year. Held on Father's Day, June 19th, OPSHBX will be on hand for the start of the run at 350 Woodside Lane to collect donations and contributions from participants and spectators. Now in its 10th year, Kelsey's Run has raised over $750,000. If you're planning to go or participate - and we would encourage you to do so please bring along a bag of groceries for the troops.

T-shirts for sale

Quality T-shirts with the handsome Operation Shoebox New Jersey 2005 poster and logo are available.

Several stores on Main Street in Somerville are selling the shirts, which feature the distinctive red, white and blue Operation Shoebox New Jersey 2005 logo, and a full-color reproduction of the Operation Shoebox New Jersey 2005 poster.

The shirts cost $10 and are also available at The Chronicle office, 44 Veterans Memorial Drive East, and at several stores on Main Street in Metuchen. All proceeds from sale of the shirts directly benefit OPSHBX.

Buy one for yourself, buy a few as gifts. We can also reproduce the shirts in quantity for veterans' groups, corporations,

Horizon Blue Cross Blue Shield of New Jersey Making Healthcare Work

Everyone agrees that the health care system has gotten more and more complicated, confusing and impersonal since the days when doctors made housecalls.

The Bag is back.

At Horizon Blue Cross Blue Shield of New Jersey, we think it's about time somebody stepped in to, in a sense, turn back the clock. Not to a time of less-advanced health care. But to a time when the health care system was a lot less complicated.

That's why we're borrowing one of medicine's most revered iconsthe doctor's medical bag-as the inspiration for everything we do. You'll be seeing it a lot in the months to come.

It stands as our promise to you, our members, that New Jersey's largest health insurance company is committed to using its technology, information, experience and knowledge to simplify the system. To make it easier for you to access. And to make you feel a lot more like a person and a lot less like paperwork. But it's not just about a promise. It's also about real initiatives like All About You. A personal summary of all your medical activity as a Horizon Blue Cross Blue Shield of New Jersey member. It's intended to help you and your doctor have more meaningful and productive dialogues. Then there's E-Prescribe. It lets your doctor send your prescriptions electronically to your pharmacy, to ensure accuracy. And Preventive Care Call Program, an automated, interactive system that actually calls you at home to remind you to get important health screenings.

The Bag is back. And with it, a return to a simpler, more common-sense approach to health care. Because making health care work the way you want it to is what we're all about.

Lim earns second straight GMCT golf crown

LARRY MURPHY/CORRESPONDENT Chris Bakazan of South Plainfield High, seen here pitching earlier this season, tossed a five-inning no-hitter when the Tigers ripped Immaculata 13-1 May 27.

EAST BRUNSWICK - Looking for a little redemption following an off day in the state tourna-ment Piscataway High's Isaac Lim got what he wanted.

Putting together a two-under par back nine at the Tamarack Golf Course to assume command Lim finished off a one-over-par round of 73 to capture his second straight Greater Middlesex Conference Golf Tournament individual championship May 26.

Lim, used birdies at the par 3 11th, the par 4 16th and the par 5 17th to take the lead at the midway point in the shotgun start, and he held it the rest of the way as he finished with a twostroke victory over runnerup Rolland Gesimondo

After not qualifying for the Meet of Champions when he didn't have a good match during sec-tional competition Lim bounced back to better last year's winning effort of 74.

Rick Buck of Edison and South Plainfield's Dan McCreash turned in the next top efforts for area golfers by finishing in a tie for eighth as both carded 81s. Metuchen's David Kolter of Billy Padula of South were in a four-way tie for 13th following rounds of 85.

Tour of Somerville Cycling crowd provides sideshow

By JIM WHITE Staff Writer

SOMERVILLE - The main race kicked off just after 2:30 p.m. Monday, but the lure of the Tour of Somerville actually took hold hours before.

America's oldest bicycle race - celebrating its 62nd running - has taken on a very festive atmosphere over the years, and it was no different this time around. Residents, families and friends situated themselves around the 1.14mile downtown circuit, crowding the curbs and sidewalk from High Street where droves had dug in for lawn parties - to Mountain Bridge streets.

At 123 West High Street, Ed Rebenack had spent the morning preparing a 57pound pig, stuffed with two whole chickens inside. About 50 people had packed his front lawn - the fourth such party he has hosted - and by race time only the head of the pig remained.
"It's a nice day to have friends and family come by and enjoy the weather — like a big block party," he said.

As the racers muscled and maneuvered for position over 43 laps - some traveling as fast as 40 mph -

Avenue, Somerset, Main and onlookers encouraged them to keep going, while eating hotdogs and sipping beer and soda.

> Some spent the afternoon catching up with old friends. Also on High Street, Somerville High School's Class of 1985 held a 20-year reunion in the parking lot next to Stires Associates. Sixty-five alumni showed up, 40 children in tow.

Amy Stires' father-in-law owns the business and parking lot. She said she knew her husband Craig Stires since they were both 3 years old but didn't begin dating him until after college.

"I thought this was quintessential Somerville," she said of organizing the reunion around the race. "This is a prime location."

Glenn Miller - recently inducted into the school's sports hall of fame for football, wrestling and track came in all the way from Orange County, Calif.

"These are all good peo-ple," he said. "We have wonderful memories and a life-

Adjusters help walk victims through complexities of fire insurance claim

Editors's note: This article is the fifth part of a continuing series that will look closely at how a family picks up the pieces, rebuilds and goes on with their life in the aftermath of a fire that destroyed their home.

By AMY S. BOBROWSKI

Just as every individual is entitled to attorney representation when going to court, "Every property owner is entitled to representation after an insured loss," said Michael Miller, owner and manager of the public adjusting firm M. Miller & Son.

A public adjuster is an individual hired by the policy owner to assist with prepar-ing, filing and adjusting insurance claims. "We do everything the insured would do if they had the time," said Miller.

It's rare that a person reads and understands their insurance policy in full, front to back and all the fine print in between. Public adjusters are experts in deciphering policies. In fact, noted Miller, many public adjusters are former insurance company employees. While helping people take the first few steps of getting their lives together after a fire, public adjusters also communicate on the same level as the insurance company.

Mike Danilla, a general adjuster for Penn National, said working with a public adjuster makes settling claims easier.

"It takes the personal element out of things," said Danilla.

'We remove emotion," said Miller. "Many insurance companies would rather deal with us because most people are devastated after a loss and can be very emotional."

Danilla hit the nail on the head.

The first few days after a fire destroyed Fawnda Genovese-Garcia's cozy saltbox style house in Green Brook, on March 26, everything was a

"You're just so over-whelmed," said Fawnda. "You just don't know what even the first step is to take to get your life back together."

That's why she hired Jeff Schwartz, a licensed public adjustor with M. Miller & Son. Schwartz met with Fawnda and her husband, Felix Garcia, on Easter Sunday, the day after the fire. Once a person hires a public adjuster, the adjuster will immediately visit the site, come up with a broad plan of action and inform the insurance company of their representation. While at the site, the adjuster will take measures to protect the property from future damages, such as tarping the roof and boarding up the entrance ways, before beginning to document the loss. Adjustors will also assist the insured in finding temporary housing in their commu-

After the immediate concerns are addressed, M. Miller & Son will send inventory agents, builders, engineers and other professionals to the site to determine the amount of damages.

Around the same time, Miller will schedule a joint inspection with his employees and representatives from the insurance company. The public adjuster will prepare the claim and send it to the insurance company. They'll give insurance companies about two weeks to read the claim before calling to schedule additional meetings.

"We'll reach out the carrier, go over their settlement and do another on-site inspection to resolve the differences between the claims. In this particular instance, things went smoothly," said Miller, who noted Fawnda's claim was settled in about a month. "Not every claim can be resolved in 30, 60, 90 days."

Schwartz said it's a proven fact that public adjusters can get their clients more money than if the clients prepared the claim themselves.

"We have the expertise," said Schwartz. "Take for example an iron. You can get an iron for $19.99 at Wal-Mart, or you can get one at Macy's for $89 with the steamer and all the bells and whistles. That's a big difference and it adds up.'

Once a settlement is reached, M. Miller & Son doesn't consider the job a done deal. 'We're in it for the long term," said Miller, who added that rebuilding typically starts within 180 days after a settlement is reached. "We can recommend builders, restorers. We're with our clients until the house is rebuilt and through all the final inspections."

Sifting Through

Some public adjusters, like M. Miller & Son, offer incentives for opting to use one of the builders they recom-

"If you work with certain builders, we can start the work before the proceeds come in from the insurance company. Sometimes it can take up to 90 days before the proceeds come in," said Miller. Additionally, he noted that several of their recommended builders will also pay the client's portion of building fees to the public adjuster.

Miller understands his line of work can be emotionally straining, but the smiles on his clients' faces when they walk into their newly built homes to the public adjuster's keep him coming back for

"It breaks your heart sometimes to see that people have lost everything. It makes you want to go to bat for these people. Every nickel you collect is getting these people back to where they were before their tragedy," he said.

It's very rewarding to watch a client's demeanor change once the rebuilding begins, said Schwartz.

"That's the positive part," he said. "You see them excited and buying new things. They have something to look forward to."

In choosing a public adjuster, noted Miller, it's important to make sure they're licensed by the state Department of Banking and Insurance. M. Miller & Son is affiliated with the National Association of Insurance Adjusters, which holds public adjusters to a strict code of ethics. The Web NAPIA www.napia.org, can help individuals find a public adjuster in their area.

"Also, check their references," said Miller. "And if they promise you the world, beware.

Additionally, said Miller, individuals should inquire as charges at the first meeting.

"In New York state, the cap is 12 1/2 percent of the total settlement," he said. "In New Jersey, there is no cap. People should beware. I've heard of people charging 30 or 40 percent."

Likewise, noted Schwartz, public adjusters should always be willing to give the victims their space.

"If it's the wrong time or too soon for them to talk, I give them a card and give them their space," said Schwartz.
