Making a pitch

TRENTON — Somerset Patriots Manager Sparky Lyle, seen at right, stopped off in the Statehouse last week to make a pitch for lawmakers' support of legislation that would nullify a Supreme Court ruling and help protect New Jersey minor league baseball teams from lawsuits filed by fans seeking damages after being struck by foul balls beyond the confines of the box seats and cheap seats. Page A7

Celebrating Mother Earth

Gaia's Gate in Millstone will be the site of a Yule celebration Sunday. According to Robin O'Connor, who helps run the store, there is a trend toward exploring ancient religions, such as those practiced by the Celts. "I've been in the closet as a witch for a long time," the former Catholic said. Page B1.

Examining the 'Carol'

EDISON — What was Charles Dickens thinking when he came up with the classic we know today as "A Christmas Carol?" The Edison Valley Playhouse brings a possible scenario to its stage this holiday season with a unique adaptation of this familiar story. Showtime is 8 p.m. today.

Dickens has an inspiration for a story that his guests will expect for his annual Christmas Eve party. But this year, rather than doing all the work and reading it himself, he enlists the help of his family and friends to perform his tale of a miser, the family of his clerk, and three ghosts who change the miser's outlook on Christmas and mankind.

This adaptation features local performers: John Roesch of South Plainfield as Frederick Dickens, Rocco Severini of South Plainfield as Mark Lemon, Scarlett Pepitone of Edison as Helen Hogarth, Tommy Leitner of Piscataway as Charley Dickens and Ryan Porter of Piscataway as the Child.

Admission is $15 for adults, $12 for seniors and students. For reservations, visit www.evplayhouse.com or call (908) 755-4654. The Edison Valley Playhouse is at 2196 Oak Tree Road, near Woodland Avenue on the South Plainfield border.

Vo-Tech, college create healthcare academy

By ALLISON ELYSE GUALTIERI
Staff Writer

NORTH BRANCH — The workforce of tomorrow will be getting a boost, starting next year, with the formation of the Somerset County Academy for Health and Medical Sciences.

The result of a new partnership, signed last week between Somerset County Vocational and Technical Schools and Raritan Valley Community College, the program will allow high school students to earn an associate's degree along with their high school diploma, and will focus on the healthcare field in order to help students gain access and job skills necessary for employees of the local pharmaceutical and healthcare companies.

The program, set to begin in September of next year, will offer a rigorous program to both Somerset County and Hunterdon County residents.

"We're not going to water anything down, this is going to be challenging," RVCC President G. Jeremiah Ryan said at the official signing of the agreement last Thursday. While the program is going to be run in the Vo-Tech school, it will be more like the specialized magnet schools being run elsewhere around the state.

Ryan, Raritan Valley Vice President of Academic Affairs Constance Mierendorf and Vo-Tech Superintendent Michael Maddaluna have been working on plans for the school for the past two years. According to Ryan, the idea came out of the research that the college has done involving the pharmaceutical members of the local business community, and dovetails with the college's efforts has been making to integrate its program with the needs of the local business community.

According to Maddaluna, the students will be offered college-level academic classes taught by faculty from both the school and the college. Students must apply to be admitted to the school, and each of the local districts will pay a portion of the cost of the school.

Every day is Christmas for evergreen farmer

WHITEHOUSE STATION — A search for the perfect Christmas tree crossed county lines into the snowy hills of Whitehouse Station, up a steep and winding grade to the evergreen-covered summit of Holly Bough Farm.

There, at the top, others, too, were in the hunt for that exceptional tree, including Leo and Claire Appolloni, who braved Saturday's icy roads all the way from South Plainfield.

"We've never had an artificial tree," said Leo Appolloni, adding the fragrance and appearance of a real tree cannot be matched.

"The artificial trees — they're plastic," he said in disgust.

Within Holly Bough's Christmas tree forest — where there are hundreds of real ones to choose from, including blue spruce, Black Hills spruce, and Douglas and Canaan firs — the Appollonis would find a tree to their liking, but it, however, was a bit short of perfect.

Farm owner Art Kaufman, who has been in the Christmas tree business for 12 years, said it's a matter of personal taste when it comes to finding the ideal tree.

His favorites are the Canaan fir and blue spruce. "When you get (a blue spruce) that has that real shiny blue — I call them pedigrees. I think those are the most beautiful," he said.

Kaufman, a former journalist in St. Louis and now director of public affairs for Merck in Whitehouse Station, decided to open the 3-and-a-half acre tree farm after purchasing the 7-acre property.

"Since moving out to the country, I decided it was

Non-profits meet about key issues

TRENTON — The Center for Non-Profit Corporations, located in North Brunswick, the state's primary voice and resource for and about the non-profit sector, hosted a policy briefing on key issues facing the non-profit sector.

New Jersey legislators and legislators-elect attended, along with members of the Center, for an update on insurance issues, non-profit accountability and prospects for the FY 2007 budget process.

Featured speakers included Linda Garibaldi, senior attorney, Legal Services of New Jersey; Jon Shure, president, and Mary Forsberg, research director, New Jersey Policy Perspective, and Linda Czipo, executive director, Center for Non-Profits.

"New Jersey's non-profits constitute a powerful sector which promotes the quality of life, health and well-being among all our state's residents," Czipo said. "The center's policy briefing offers an important opportunity for non-profits to send a message to Trenton about the strength of our sector and for lawmakers to learn firsthand about the economic and policy issues that confront us."

Among the issues covered at the briefing were the impact of health insurance rates and federally-mandated financial reporting standards.

Approximately 125 non-profit leaders, legislators and legislative staff were expected to attend the briefing, which was followed by a luncheon reception at the Masonic Temple on Barracks Street in Trenton.

The Center for Non-Profit Corporations is a charitable umbrella organization providing advocacy, legal and management assistance, research, training and cost-saving programs for New Jersey's charitable non-profit groups.

Founded in 1982, the center builds the power of New Jersey's non-profit community by serving as the state's primary voice and resource for and about the non-profit sector. Its statewide membership encompasses the broad spectrum of non-profit activity from youth groups, social service agencies, arts, cultural and educational organizations, to faith-based organizations, health, housing and environmental protection.

Four are indicted in Bound Brook robbery

SOMERVILLE — The Somerset County Grand Jury returned indictments against four co-defendants on charges of conspiracy to commit robbery, second degree and armed robbery, first degree last week.

Those co-defendants are James Arline, 18, Raymond Cheley, 19, Brian Toby, 22, and Sarah Vasquez, 19. All co-defendants reside in Plainfield. Additional charges were handed to Cheley were possession of a weapon for an unlawful purpose — a 30-inch metal pipe, third degree — and unlawful possession of a weapon, fourth degree.

After their arrest on Nov. 7, Judge Frank W. Gasiorowski of the NJ Superior Court set bail in this case in the amount of $100,000 cash against all four co-defendants.

They were lodged in the Somerset County Jail in default of bail. The co-defendants continue to reside in the county jail. All are to have no contact with the victim of the alleged robbery as a special condition of bail should they post bail and be released.

On Dec. 5, Judge Edward M. Coleman of the N.J. Superior Court lowered co-defendant Vasquez's bail to $75,000 cash or bond. The special condition of no contact with the victim was not altered, despite the reduction in Vasquez's bail.

The investigation stems from an allegation of robbery made by a Bound Brook resident who was pedaling his bicycle on Talmage Ave. near the corner of Lamonte Ave. on Nov. 7.

It is alleged that the four co-defendants, traveling in a car driven by Vasquez, drove up to the victim and Toby knocked the victim off his bicycle. Afterward, Toby, Arline and Cheley allegedly assaulted the victim and, in the course of the assault, stole his blue tote style bag containing personal belongings.

The defendants fled in the vehicle driven by Vasquez.

It is alleged that Cheley struck the victim with a metal pipe in the course of the robbery.

Shortly after the victim was beaten and robbed, he flagged down a Bound Brook Police Officer who obtained a description of the parties and their vehicle.

They were apprehended a short time later after the Bound Brook Police stopped them in the car at the intersection of Union and Mountain avenues in Bound Brook.

Horse power comes to Main Street

Two local communities offered the chance for a carriage ride over the past week.

In New Brunswick, horse-drawn carriage rides were offered while in Somerville, the Downtown Management Corporation was expected to provide free carriage rides as a part of its holiday celebration. People could tour the downtowns in both communities in a carriage from Hunterdon Coach and Wagon to see the lights and decorations and get into the holiday spirit.

The vis-à-vis rides, or face-to-face, will accommodate 4 to 6 riders per trip, said Somerville downtown manager Cynthia Hollod.

Hunterdon Coach and Wagon, located in Delaware Township, provides coaches, carriages, and wagons for a number of events throughout the Central Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania area. According to Angela Weinhold, the business appears regularly both year-round and during the holidays. According to Weinhold, the group has not given rides in Somerville before. This year, they were able to fit the borough into their schedule.

Students currently in the eighth grade may apply starting in February for the first year, which will begin next September. Students must take an entrance exam, composed of reading, math, and an essay, to be considered for admission, and will be accepted from each of the school districts in the two counties. Interested students and their families can attend an information session held at 7 p.m. on Jan. 11 at the college, where they can obtain the entrance requirements and find out more about the curriculum.

time for a lifestyle change," he said. Kaufman said he puts in about 250 hours of work a year on the farm, not counting time consumed by sales. Maintaining the roughly 4,000 trees that cover the hill involves a lot of shearing and shaping, as well as maintaining the grounds in the warmer months. "Every year I say this is the last year, because it's so much work. Getting the trees ready is a lot of work," he said. "But for me this is wonderful. Dealing with the people - this is the fun." Later in the day, Wayne Pellicane of Branchburg found his tree, cut it down himself, and dragged the 6-footer out of the forest so that it could be netted and strapped to his car. "You realize how out of shape you are," he said with a laugh.

When Christmas was — Christmas

Just in time for Christmas, newspapers, TV and radio have been filled with stories about the so-called "assault on Christmas."

A big department-store chain drops the word "Christmas" from its advertising in favor of the less-specific and more-inclusive word "holiday."

Municipalities want to put up a "holiday tree" instead of a "Christmas tree."

It's become a cause celebre for both conservatives, who decry what they perceive as a secularization of a holy time and the latest example of how left-wing "political correctness" threatens the Republic, and liberals who cite the controversy as evidence that right-wingers refuse to accept the fact that not all of us are white and Christian.

We find ourselves thinking about reactions we've encountered through the years to our newspaper's long-time practice during the Christmas season of publishing on the editorial page both the New Testament accounts of Christ's nativity and the famous "Yes, Virginia" essay written more than 100 years ago by Francis P. Church of the New York Sun.

We've heard occasional complaints in response to both, from those who say Santa has nothing to do with the true meaning of Christmas and from those who say reprinting the familiar scriptural account of the birth of Jesus excludes those of other faiths.

We've always reasoned that Christmas is indeed a commemoration of the birthday of Jesus, and that it's appropriate to acknowledge and celebrate that tradition. But we've also figured that Santa Claus — a kind, generous man who loves all children, whatever their religious or political leanings — is nothing more or less than a reflection of what may be the greatest virtues espoused by the founder of Christianity: Tolerance and charity.

Of course we hope those who want to replace "Christmas" with "holiday" will realize that the idea is silly and unnecessary. After all, Charles Dickens did not write a book titled "A Holiday Carol."

On the other hand, if some folks feel more comfortable with the phrase "Happy Holidays" or "holiday tree," well . . . God bless them, everyone, for these words and semantics have nothing to do with the essence of the season and more to do with our human frailties and foibles.

A thought: Isn't it ironic that so much of the wrath of the "save Christmas" forces is focused on retailers and their advertising brochures? In effect, these folks are advocating for the commercialization of Christmas.

Another thought: Christmas itself doesn't need saving from anyone or by anyone. It existed before we all arrived here and will be here after we are all gone.

So Merry Christmas! And Happy Holidays! Happy Hanukkah! Happy

Kwanzaa! Happy Ramadan! Best wishes for winter solstice, too! Christmas transcends its roots in a specific religion — and those on both sides of the Christmas/holiday dispute should take a deep breath, sit down with a glass of eggnog or a hot toddie, and reflect on the season's true meaning as a beacon of tolerance, compassion, charity, hope and peace.

"Absolutely not. I think political correctness is starting to be very annoying. People are not expressing themselves because they feel they might be offensive."

State leader stands beside Cullen victims

To The Editor:
The Executive Commission on Ethical Standards recently cited Richard Pompelio, former head of the Victims of Crime Compensation Board, for an ethics violation.

He is criticized for having mingled a state and a private agency when he filed briefs with the court to force serial murder Charles Cullen to appear at sentencing and face his victims' families.

Richard Pompelio has worked to insure that the rights of crime victims are protected and he deserves to be applauded for his efforts. Because of his advocacy it appears that I, along with the other families of Charles Cullen's victims, will be able to look him in the eye at sentencing and express the horror that his cowardly acts have visited upon us.

Cullen may believe that he orchestrated one final bit of control over us by forcing the state to allow him to donate a kidney on his terms, but the fact remains that had the families not asserted their rights, with the help of Mr. Pompelio, Cullen would have spent his sentencing day cowering in his cell.

It must also be noted that it was a wise move on Mr. Pompelio's part to file our brief under the board and the New Jersey Crime Victims Center as it appears that the board has abandoned us now that Mr. Pompelio is no longer the head of that agency.

Fortunately, in his new position, he continues to represent us and has vowed to stand with us at the sentencing hearing. At a time when New Jersey politics are considered a national joke, it would have sent a strong signal had the commission rejected politics and recognized the strong ethical standards practiced by Mr. Pompelio.

Senior housing OK hurting residents

To The Editor:
I am appalled at what is going on in Bridgewater.

A number of residents fought the Woodmont senior citizens housing development (Phase I), to be located on routes 202-206. We have fought this since 2003. We fought it for the type of building that is to be built. It is high density housing.

This has numerous repercussions for the residents and anyone traveling routes 202-206.

The residents' pleas were not heard and it was voted in and approved by people who do not live in that location or have to deal with the problems created by it. It was eventually approved by judges who ignored the intent of Bridgewater's Master Plan and instead based their decision on their misinterpretation of the senior citizen housing definition.

During the time of litigation the Township Council repealed the ordinance with this overlay in the Master Plan that allowed this mistake to be made in the first place. Doing this was a relief to the residents.

By removing the overlay, this type of development would not be able to occur again to any other neighborhood. Much to the residents' dismay, the council and Planning Board have settled with the developers of Woodmont — who have a lawsuit pending against them — to proceed with building Phase II by adding an overlay. Remember an overlay is what got us in this mess to start with. This overlay is supposed to be for that specific project and for that particular property only.

However, the ordinance that has passed has clauses within it that says this ordinance can nullify other ordinances that are inconsistent with it.

Does this mean that the township will allow zoning to be changed project by project, lot by lot? Why is the township allowing control of its code to transfer to developers?

Homebuyers buy property for a reason. Usually it is because of what the area offers. Now the zoning on a singular project can be changed. What you have next to you today may be changed to whatever at any given time — depending on who is in office and what they stand for. When Bridgewater residents attend either the planning or zoning board meetings, their thoughts, ideas, suggestions should be respectfully received and considered! We live here.

New Jersey Reads gives $12K to group

New Jersey Reads, a statewide non-profit group created to eradicate illiteracy, has given a $12,000 Check Into Literacy Grant to Literacy Volunteers of Somerset County to implement a new Tutor Recruitment Program.

The volunteer group currently has a waiting list of more than 120 students and a severe shortage of tutors. The grant will enable the organization to hire a part-time tutor recruiter to implement a new Tutor Recruitment Program. The outreach will include local corporations, civic groups, and community organizations as well as creation of new brochures, flyers, and information packets. The goal is to create tutor-student matches and reduce the waiting list.

"The need in Somerset County is huge," said Beth Ybarra, director of development and marketing for literacy volunteers. "We have more than 120 students waiting to be matched with tutors. This grant will enable us to have a very pro-active, targeted campaign to recruit tutors who are so desperately needed. It won't ease the demand, but the grant will help us help those students who have been waiting a very long time. We are very excited."

Since it was established three years ago, New Jersey Reads has received requests for $1.3 million in grant monies from literacy organizations throughout the state. It has awarded $225,000 through its Check Into Literacy grant program. According to Penni Wild, executive director of New Jersey Reads, 40 percent of the state's six million adults have literacy problems. Of that number, 1.4 million or 23 percent are functionally illiterate, 27 percent cannot use a bus schedule or write a letter and 50 percent cannot locate information on a map or total a bank deposit slip.

"Clearly, the literacy challenge is enormous, but thanks to organizations like Literacy Volunteers of Somerset County, we are making progress in our endeavor to help every child and adult in New Jersey to read, write, speak and understand English well enough to achieve his or her personal goals," Wild said.

Literacy volunteers is an accredited affiliate of ProLiteracy America, a non-profit organization that promotes literacy through a network of community volunteer programs. The organization provides free, individual and small group literacy tutoring in Basic Literacy and English for Speakers of Other Languages to adults in Somerset County. The group recruits and trains volunteer tutors who are matched with adult students.

New Jersey Reads, in partnership with Verizon, has awarded more than $75,000 in grants statewide to non-profits and schools for programs similar to the LVSC initiative. Verizon customers can "check the box" on their monthly phone bill and donate $1 a month to the initiative.

New Jersey Reads is the first non-profit organization to expand literacy programs across New Jersey.

Manville VFW post to host Feb. 4 event

Operation Shoebox New Jersey 2005 is still a few months short of its first anniversary, but plans are being made to mark the occasion with a community-wide event in Manville that will include packing at least 1,000 boxes for shipment to U.S. troops overseas.

The Veterans of Foreign War Post 2290 will co-host the event Feb. 4 at their 600 Washington Ave. facility.

James A. Wisor, Jr., president and Renny Dilks, commander, have promised the post will do everything to make the event a success. Mayor Angelo Corradino is also spreading the word throughout town, hoping to line up merchants and residents who will pitch in to ensure a successful event.

Details will be announced next month.

Christmas carpet

If you're in the market for carpet - wall-to-wall, stair runners, remnants - make sure you stop by B&B Carpets on Main Street in Bound Brook this weekend.

Owner Ike Hishmeh will once again donate all his profits from sales tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday to Operation Shoebox New Jersey 2005.

In October, Hishmeh, who came to the United States from Jerusalem in 1967, ran a similar promotion, donating the weekend's profits to victims of Hurricane Katrina.

But he wasn't finished giving. Next on his list was OPSHBX.

He ran a weekend promotion in November, and presented a check for $1,000 to help send supplies and phone cards to U.S. soldiers and Marines overseas.

Here's hoping he's as successful this weekend.

B&B Carpets is open tomorrow, 8 a.m.-8 p.m.; Saturday, 8 a.m.-6 p.m. and Sunday, 10 a.m.-6 p.m. The storefront is at the intersection of Main Street and Mountain Boulevard.

Call (732) 469-4800 for further information.

Somerville Tribute

Somerville Mayor Brian Gallagher is asking borough residents for help in tracking down active servicemen and women, especially those on duty in Iraq, Afghanistan the Mideast.

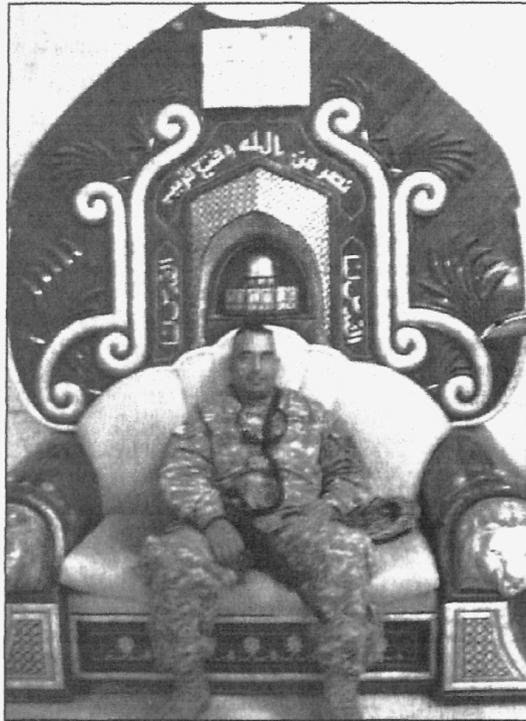

The borough plans to recognize and honor all active soldiers, Marines, sailors and airmen at its Jan. 1 reorganization meeting, according to Gallagher.

The mayor is urging parents, friends, husbands and wives to get in touch with Chick Sternadori, borough administrator, at (908) 704-6983.

We'd ask that you also contact The Chronicle, so that we can add those names to our shipping list to ensure they receive packages from their neighbors in Central New Jersey.

"I Love Lulu"

The Branchburg Recreation

COURTESY SGT. SAIS SINGH

Soon after arriving in Iraq last month, Sgt. Sais Singh, a 1993 graduate of Somerville High School, had an opportunity to visit one of Saddam Hussein's palaces, where he posed for this picture seated in an opulent chair.

Department will stage an original production entitled "I Love Lulu" on Jan. 13-14, with both performances benefiting Operation Shoebox New Jersey 2005.

In April, 42 students from Branchburg schools presented "Darn Yanks," and rather than sell tickets and charge admission, asked those who came to see the show to bring a bag of groceries and make a donation to help OPSHBX maintain its supply line. "Darn Yanks" was a huge success on the stage - both shows were sold out - and the sell-out crowds brought hundreds of bags of donated items to the show. Students also wrote letters to the soldiers, and received several replies from the troops.

We'll have more details in a few weeks.

Patriots' Lyle feels court ruling is off base

By ROD HIRSCH
Staff Writer

TRENTON — Somerset Patriots Manager Sparky Lyle stopped off in the Statehouse last week to make a pitch for lawmakers' support of legislation that would nullify a Supreme Court ruling and help protect New Jersey minor league baseball teams from lawsuits filed by fans seeking damages after being struck by foul balls beyond the confines of the box seats and cheap seats.

The New Jersey Supreme Court in September issued a ruling that would permit fans to sue a club if they are struck by a ball in areas of a ballpark not including the traditional seating areas along the base paths, down the foul lines and beyond the outfield.

The ruling stems from a 1999 incident at the Newark Bears' Eagles Stadium when a fan at a portable beer stand was struck by a foul ball during an Atlantic League of Professional Baseball game.

The proposed legislation, drafted by Assemblyman Patrick Diegman, D-Middlesex, and approved by the Assembly Judiciary Committee, would require ballparks to post signs and make repeated public address announcements during the game that the possibility of being struck by a ball — or a bat — is one of the "inherent dangers" of watching a baseball game.

The bill now heads to the full Assembly for its consideration.

"Foul balls are a part of the game," said Lyle, a relief pitcher specialist and Cy Young Award winner with the New York Yankees in 1977.

"The bottom line for me is that if people get hit by a ball, they're not paying attention," added the 16-year major league veteran.

The ruling did get the attention of ballpark team owners because of the liability issue. Lawsuits could force insurance premiums to rise. That would certainly impact ticket prices, which are characteristically much lower at the minor league level, which has helped buoy the appeal of minor league baseball in New Jersey.

Insurance companies might also require ballclubs to install safety netting around the perimeter of the ballpark to separate the field seating areas from the concourse level, which houses refreshment and concession stands, rest rooms and other amenities.

"What are we talking about, maybe two, three balls go back there in a week at our place," Lyle said, referring to Commerce Bank Park in Bridgewater, which is owned by Somerset County.

The netting, too, could impact the bottom line and also detract from the aesthetics of the ballpark, according to Patrick McVerry, president and general manager of the Patriots, one of seven minor league teams that call New Jersey home.

The Patriots and Bears are two of eight teams in the independent ALPB. Together with the Camden Riversharks and the Atlantic City Surf, the New Jersey teams make up 50 percent of the league, which has its offices in Camden.

Take a carriage trip down main

Horse-drawn carriages coming to Somerville

By ALLISON ELYSE GUALTIERI
Staff Writer

SOMERVILLE — "Oh, what fun it is to ride in a one-horse open sleigh!" Though it wasn't over the river and through the woods to grandmother's house, the Downtown Management Corporation was expected to offer free carriage rides to the public as a part of its holiday celebration.

People could tour downtown in a carriage, providing an opportunity to see the lights and decorations and get into the holiday spirit, on Friday. The rides, which will be provided by Hunterdon Coach and Wagon of Delaware Township, will take visitors up and down Main Street.

The vis-à-vis rides, or face-to-face, will accommodate 4 to 6 riders per trip, said downtown manager Cynthia Hollod. This is the first time carriage rides are offered in Somerville as a part of the holiday season, and the DMC hopes to draw people to Somerville with the distinctive offer.

Holiday shopper Jack Ciattarelli, who works in Somerville, said that he hadn't heard of the carriages. Main Street has been busy lately, he said, and "Somerville is doing a great job getting people here for the holidays."

When asked while he was shopping at the Big Little Railroad Shop if he would come back to take a ride, he said yes. "I'll have to come down with the kids."

For Big Little Railroad Shop owner Jan Kusma, the draw-an-offer coupon boxes that the DMC has placed in local businesses has helped lead people to her store.

"A lot of people have gotten our coupon from other stores and come in," she said. "They've been helpful."

While she couldn't judge an increase in foot traffic as a result of the DMC's efforts, as she has only been in her current location since August, she said that her shop has been getting people in who have walked by and seen her window display.

"I have lots of people who stop and watch the trains, and then come in," she said. "I have noticed that a lot of people are talking about what's going on in Somerville."

The stores, many of which are open late on Thursdays and Fridays during the holiday season, will hopefully reap the rewards of people coming for carriage rides.

Already, some local businesses have seen more people on the streets as a result of the holiday efforts.

"I've gotten some new customers," said Patti Manos, co-owner of Torpedos Touch of Glass. "The restaurants, especially Origins, have helped us. People wander and window shop after dinner, and then call us the next day and say, 'I saw this in your window last night.'"

Manos said that she wasn't planning on staying open late on Friday, but the carriage rides have her thinking about it.

"We may even stay open late, until 8," she said. "It might be well worth it for us."

Even if she closes at her normal time, she said she would stop and check it out, and maybe go for a ride herself.

At least one business owner said the DMC's efforts this holiday season have been successful.

"Anything the town and the merchants can do to bring people in is a positive," said Tino Cintorrino, of Tino's Hair Salon and Body Spa, adding that the free parking offered by the borough is a plus. "I think all those are great ideas."

Robin O'Connor displays Tarot cards at Gaia's Gate in Millstone. The store will be the site of a Yule celebration on Sunday led by owner Patricia Miller.

Yule celebration to mark winter solstice

By ALLISON ELYSE GUALTIERI
Staff Writer

MILLSTONE — Nearly every culture and civilization has a celebration that falls near the winter solstice. While they don't all include jingling bells, many of the familiar Christmas symbols have their roots in older traditions.

Patricia Miller, of Gaia's Gate, will be hosting a Yule celebration at 3 p.m. tomorrow at the store.

"Basically, we're going to be blessing and burning a Yule log, and everyone will get to put their intentions on the log," she said. "The idea is to set your focus for the New Year. You place your intentions into the log, you focus that into the log and we'll have something, a decoration of some sort, for everyone to put on the log to symbolize that, and we'll offer up the log to the fire."

Miller, who has practiced pagan religions for almost 13 years, said that this observance will reflect mostly Scandinavian and Celtic traditions, but that a solstice celebration is common around the world.

"Almost every civilization has some sort of winter solstice observance, because that was the time when the sun would return and life would be coming back to the earth," she said. "In a lot of ancient belief systems, the wise people of the tribe would hold an all-night vigil to encourage the sun back."

While she won't be staying up until sunrise, this will be the first time Miller, who hosts other circles, classes, and workshops, will have a public Yule celebration.

Last year, she hosted a private Yule celebration for friends and family.

Robin O'Connor, who helps out at Gaia's Gate, will be at a different Yule rite. O'Connor, who is a former Catholic, will join with the other members of her coven to celebrate and offer thanksgiving.

"I've been in the closet as a witch for a long time," she said, until she moved to New Jersey. Far from the black-clothed, sullen image of modern pagans, she said she found more like-minded witches, and joined the Coven of the Wooden Spoon.

Her husband has joined as well. Though O'Connor has been reading Tarot cards since she was 15 and has been a practicing pagan almost 20 years, her husband has only recently become interested in the practice. After 20 years of marriage, she said, he finally started coming to circles and was initiated just this year.

O'Connor said that the speakers and classes at Gaia's Gate are helpful and informative as well. In addition to the circles and seminars, the Gate also offers holiday celebrations and rituals.

Yule is one of eight holidays in the pagan religion, Miller said. There is Imbolc, which falls in February; a Spring Equinox celebration; Beltane, a planting and fertility celebration that falls on May 1; a midsummer celebration on the summer solstice; Lunasadh, which falls on August 1; the autumn equinox in September; and Samhain, which falls on Halloween.

Gaia's Gate is located at 33 North River St.

Boredom inspires actor to become playwright

By ALLISON ELYSE GUALTIERI
Staff Writer

NORTH BRANCH — Dennis Russo was a little bored of the parts that were out there, so he wrote one for himself.

"I guess, as an actor, I got tired of what was out there and I wanted to write myself a good part," the theater instructor said. "That's kind of the ongoing thing with actors, is searching for good parts."

The resulting play, "Tuesdays in Jersey with Andy," was named a winner at the New Jersey Playwrights Festival, sponsored by William Patterson University. Russo, a full-time theater instructor at Raritan Valley Community College, described it as a "dark, absurdist comedy" that came out of a rather dark time in his life. The reception the play has gotten, however, has been positive from the beginning.

While studying at the Actors' Studio in New York, he and a friend, Marc Solomon, presented the first five pages of what was to become "Tuesdays in Jersey with Andy." There was such a great response to that start, Russo and Solomon were encouraged to develop it further.

"I was waiting for the phone to ring on some other things, and it was just what we needed to hear," he said. "It's something I had been itching to do."

An earlier and much different version of the play was presented at the Westbeth Theater in New York last year, which allowed Russo to figure out what did and didn't work about it. With the help of actress Louise Lasser, the play was revised and reworked into its current version.

That evolution was also an evolution for Russo: from actor into writer.

"Now, it's opened up a can of worms," he said, adding that he's gotten more into writing as a solitary activity, as opposed to the communal nature of acting. "Now, I'd say I'm fifty-fifty."

That shift has been good for his work at the college as well. "This is one job where it's encouraged to go on, to achieve outside success, because it makes you more valuable here," he said.

The college is where Russo discovered theater. As a student at North Hunterdon High School, he was involved in sports; once at Raritan Valley, he became involved in the theater program, which led him to Montclair State and finally to the New School in New York, where he earned his masters in fine arts.

Now, he lives in Somerville and is back at the college, teaching alongside some of his former professors.

"The students are great, my colleagues are great," he said. "I enjoy teaching much more. There's less of an unknown; I pretty much know what I'm going to be doing day to day. As a student, there's always a curveball being thrown at you."

Hopefully, there won't be any curveballs in the production being staged at William Patterson, because Russo will be involved as a consultant, and will also be present at auditions. At the original reading, he disliked one of the actor's portrayals "I told them, just don't let it be him again," he said, noting that sometimes it can be difficult as a writer to watch actors and a director interpret the play.

For "Tuesdays in Jersey with Andy," he hopes that the William Patterson production, which will run from Feb. 10 to 18, won't be the last. Russo said that he's looking to do a reading in January in Madison, which will hopefully lead to a longer run for the play at a different theater.

"We'd love to have a run, at a New Jersey theater or in New York," he
