"When I was young, at recess, all we wanted to do was play kickball," said Sackie, who is coordinating the project for her Girl Scout Gold Award. "I wanted to incorporate somehow, to intermingle specialneed and non-special-need children." Sackie began putting the program together in May. She wrote up a proposal, got permission to use the fields at Carol Pager Park at Exchange Field, and found volunteer coaches, most of whom are also students at Somerville High School.

South Plainfield school welcomes UN leader

SOUTH PLAINFIELD - Edgar Casals, president of the Federation of UN Staff Associations, United Nations Economic Commission for Africa, Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, recently visited the South Plainfield campus of Bryman Institute in his quest to bring students to America to train in the health care field.

"The key to eliminating poverty in Africa is education," said Casals.

He said there are not many private schools in Africa such as Bryman and it was his goal is to bring students to America so they could be trained in the health care profession in schools like the Bryman Institute.

During a school tour with Campus President Norman Rankis, Casals saw first hand how students are trained by Bryman Institute for careers as Medical Assistants, Medical Insurance Biller/Coder and Pharmacy Technicians.

Casals said there are scholarships available from the UN as well as corporations and civic organizations that could pay for the education of qualified students to complete their education in the United States. Students would then return to their native country where they could put their newly acquired skills to great use.

Bryman Institute is dedicated to providing quality, career-focused training programs in the growing field of allied health. "We help make the career aspirations of our students come true through education, career services, placement and financial aid programs," Rankis said.

EDISON - The Robert Wood Johnson 1962 Charitable Trust has donated $500,000 to the Middlesex County College Foundation's Community Investment Campaign.

The trust has also issued a matching challenge: for every new or increased donation made until Dec. 31, 2006, it will match that gift up to a total of $500,000. Consequently, the potential is for a total gift of $1 million

"I am absolutely thrilled by the Johnson family's generosity," said Michael David-Wilson, executive director of the Middlesex County College Foundation. "When the challenge is fulfilled, this gift will provide perpetual support for 50 more students annually and touch the lives of generations and generations of students.

David-Wilson said he is confident that the foundation will be able to raise $500,000 from the community to meet the challenge grant.

The trust will also match any written pledge commitment even if the first payment on the pledge is not received by Dec. 31. Likewise the challenge will be considered met for anyone who can provide documentation of intent to make a planned gift, provide a gift of life insurance, or name the foundation as a partial or full beneficiary in their will.

David-Wilson also said that Community the gift puts the Community Investment Campaign at $2.5 million, only $500,000 from its $3 million goal.

Interestingly, the Johnson family made the first major gift to the Foundation in 1984 a $1.5 million gift to start the foundation's Scholarship Endowment Fund. The college's Johnson Learning Center was later named for the family in recognition of the gift.

The foundation was chartered in 1966 to provide educational opportunities for qualified students and those requiring financial assistance to attend Middlesex County College. By consistently growing financial aid and scholarships and raising funds for select college programs, the foundation helps students realize their academic and career dreams. Since its inception 40 years ago the foundation has provided more than $7 million in assistance to over 10,500 students.

Soggy situation on Green Brook farm

By AMY S. BOBROWSKI Staff Writer

GREEN BROOK - There are more than just puddles on Wilbur Mobus' six acres of land off of Morning Glory Road.

His farm, in fact, has small pools of water and Mobus has to wear his work boots almost every time he ventures out doors because his would be covered in mud. And when it rains, a stream almost six inches deep appears throughout the center of the site.

The question is not the presence of water on the property. The debate is where the water came from.

Mobus, who will soon be 80 years old, claims his property was dry until the Top of the World housing development was constructed in the 1990s.

The construction of the 140 houses, he said, included clearing and leveling of the land forcing runoff to trickle down to his property. "This never happened before the homes were put in," he said.

Pulte Homes, the developer of the housing complex, claims the water was always on the Mobus property and said it has even completed a drainage project to keep runoff away from his land.

"The project was approved by a number of engineers," said Jim Mullen, a develop-ment approval manager for Pulte "Both Green Brook and Warren townships and the county gave their seals of approval for it. There is nothing to show that the water wasn't always there."

Still Mobus said the drainage elements, which include two detention basins, aren't affective.

"There are two basins 650 feet apart and they're dry," he said. "The water comes right through to my property.'

But Green Brook Township Engineer Richard Roseberry said the basins aren't supposed to be pools of water.

"The basins are piped," he said. "They're supposed to be dry. The only time you'll have water in there is during heavy rain, but it'll drain out pretty quickly. It (the drainage program) is doing exactly what it is supposed to do."

Additionally, noted Roseberry, a drainage swale built by Mobus is proof that water was always on his proper-

"He admitted he diverted it with the drainage ditch across his property," he said. "You just can't do that."

Mobus filed a lawsuit against Pulte in 2001, seeking a remedy to the runoff problem and retribution for buildings, equipment and collectables he said were damaged by the water.

The suit was sent to a mediator and voluntarily dismissed by both parties who hope to come to an amicable resolution through the mediation process. However, explained Mobus' attorney Joe Murray, the suit can be reinstated at any time if either party feels the mediation process is faltering.

Mobus, who raises pigs, goats, chickens and cows on the farm, said about $300,000 worth of items - from storage buildings and fencing, to antique furniture and farm equipment have been ruined or damaged by the water.

The roots of several mature trees on the farm are just as exposed as Mobus' nerves after years of frustration.

"They have to get rid of the water," he said. "I've got big trees that are dying. I'm out of the pig business because I can't keep the fence posts in the

In a garage behind a house in a suburban Middlesex County community, Jeremy Solomon isn't restoring a classic car and he's not constructing a bird house.

Instead the 41-year-old Somerville borough attorney is building his own airplane. It's not a model airplane. In fact, Solomon's Velocity Canard is an experimental aircraft.

When complete, the four-seat craft will travel about 200 miles per hour and take Solomon, his family and friends on excursions throughout the Northeast.

"The first trip will be to Massachusetts to visit a good friend of mine who taught me how to fly and who comes down to help me out (with the construction of the plane) occasionally," said Solomon, who learned to fly in 1994 and has been working on the plane since 2001. "He gets the maiden voyage. We also want to go snowboarding in New England and down to Florida and visit family in Virginia and West Virginia.

and I can't devote every week-end out here," he said. "I can't say that I have a regular schedule ... It's not something you can do for an hour. You need a chunk of time. Just to set everything up could take an hour."

Solomon recently completed crafting the fuselage and shaping the wings. The plane, sold as a kit by a company in Florida, comes in pieces, he explained. Customers are sent loads of foam chunks. Solomon covered the pieces, which are in the form of the plane's parts, with epoxy and draped fiberglass sheets over them.

"The epoxy soaks up the fiberglass and the fabric takes shape and becomes rock hard," Solomon said. "The parts come shaped for you. I like this because it's a project I can do at home. I had to purchase very few tools."

Annika Sorenstam, the world's top-ranked female golfer, gives some driving pointers to spectators during last Saturday's clinic at the Neshanic Valley Golf Course. Sorenstam's appearance was the highlight of the Somerset County Park Commission's 50th anniversary fes-

Sorenstam a hit with fans

By ALLAN CONOVER

NESHANIC STATION — While her physical ability and skills were a visual treat, much like the peaking foliage on the surrounding hills, Annika Sorenstam freely conceded she's somewhat of a neophyte regarding the technical merits of her equipment.

"What kind of shaft do you prefer on your driver?" was among the inquiries aimed at the world's highest-rated female golfer last Saturday afternoon as she was in the middle of an instructional clinic at the Neshanic Valley Golf Course.

After pausing a second, she dead-panned, "Orange," prompting peals of laughter from the fans and spectators crammed into the temporary bleachers adjacent to the driving range tee area. Sorenstam explained she relies heavily on the folks at Callaway Golf - her primary sponsor - to make certain her various clubs are tweaked and tinkered with to meet her optimum comfort level, although she did say the basic gear she uses can be purchased "right off the shelf." She does prefer a 46-inch driver, one of the 14 clubs in her black bag.

"And they're all Callaway clubs, let me tell you," she said with a knowing smile.

The diminutive 5-foot-6 Sorenstam was affable and courteous during the 45-minute session, appearing to be quite comfortable and at ease while discussing her philosophy of play and giving swing demonstrations and patiently answering questions from the many spectators who showed up for the event.

This was the crowning highlight of the Somerset County Park Commission's "Day of Family Golf," which was part of the organization's year-long 50th anniversary celebration.

She wasted no time generating "Oohs" and "Ahhs" from the gallery as she demonstrated uncanny accuracy to various flags firing off warm-up shots with her wedge and 9-iron.

"Always have a target you're aiming at, even when you're warming up," she said.

Dressed in a black shirt, white pants and wearing a Callaway wowed everyone with a classic display of powerful driving.

Sorenstam, who's earned almost $2 million this year while posting top-10 finishes in 15 of the 18 LPGA tournaments she's entered, had begun her visit to the course just after 3 p.m., taking a seat under a green canopy and affixing her signature to photos, golf balls and baseball-type caps for individuals who queued up in a lengthy line on a sunny, brisk day.

In accordance with her status and elite standing among the Forbes 500 - after all, she's pocketed more money than any woman in LPGA history - she was flanked by several representatives from Callaway and the golf course as well as a pair of Somerset County policemen.

Among those who collected an autograph was Bridgewater's Yuhlan Cho, who was there with her husband Paul. Like many fans in attendance, they'd seen Sorenstam play this summer at the HSBC Women's World Match-Play Championship at Hamilton Farm Golf Club in Bedminster.

"We saw her haul a great shot from the fairway - what a thrill," said Paul Cho.

Another big fan was Hillsborough's Denise Dimino, who said, "I just love her - she's my idol. I just like her smooth swing it's so easy and beautiful.'

Carl Weigner, the former Bridgewater-Raritan High athletic director and current president of the Skyland Conference, was also among those in attendance.

"How many times do you get to see the best woman golfer in the world this close?" said Weigner, a Branchburg resident. "I mean, it's one thing to see her on TV, or even in a tournament, but you don't get an idea of her size, and then it's like holy mackerel, look how far she hits the ball."

Also anxious to see Sorenstam take a few swings on the driving range was Raritan's Jerry Moore, who was Somerville High's highly-successful head football coach from 1975-84 before leaving for Elizabeth High.

'She just has that great, fluid swing," said Moore, now a parttime instructor at Neshanic Valley. "She's a player, no doubt about it.'

Spartans 'D' keys victory

BRIDGEWATER -Even after a few stutters and sputters prevented Immaculata High from putting any points on the Basilone Memorial Field scoreboard in the early going, there was little apprehension along the Spartans' sideline.

After all, their defense was spending almost as much time in the Bridgewater-Raritan backfield as Panthers' quarterback Alonzo Miller. And the Spartans were having a heck of a lot more fun back there, too.

Finally breaking through for the game's first points shortly before the halftime break, unbeaten Immaculata went on to secure a 13-0 Skyland Conference inter-division triumph Oct. 20. It was the Spartans' seventh straight success and first shutout of the season.

"The real negative for our offense were all the penalties we had," said Immaculata Head Coach Pierce Frauenheim. "We moved the ball pretty well at times but penalties stopped some drives. That was our biggest problem.

"But our defense played outstanding," he added. 'Bridgewater made a few big third-down plays but we put a lot of pressure on their quarterback. The best pass defense is a good pass rush and we certainly had that."

The Panthers (1-6), who were coming off an overtime victory over Hillsborough, have gradually been developing a pass-oriented offense because the option which Head Coach Tony Maglione has always favored has been stuck in low gear all season.

But that mattered little to the Spartans' aggressive defensive group, which came through with a whopping eight quarterback sacks and limited the home team to a mere 76 yards.

"We have changed our offense," said Maglione. 'We're trying to throw a little more because we don't have the big bodies up the middle to go with the option. And we don't have an option quarterback who can take all the hits

H.S. FOOTBALL

IMMACULATA 13 BRIDGEWATER-RARITAN 0

Immaculata, meanwhile, again leaned on the potent 1-2 running punch of sopho-more Theo Riddick and senior A.J. Albert to accumulate 249 yards on the ground as the Spartans' veteran interior line opened up one hole after another against a B-R unit that was stacking all kinds of personnel up front.

But the Panthers' defense, which has been guite respectable most of the campaign, still found a way to limit the visitors to two touchdowns.

In just one other game, a 17-3 victory over Ridge, had Immaculata been held to less than three TDs.

"Our kids are capable of playing good football," said Maglione, "but we just don't put four great quarters together. I thought our defensive team did a great job. We had a couple of mental errors but overall we did a good job and held our own against a team that's bigger and has some very talented backs.

"I didn't think they would shut us out. I think we've gone against defenses that are in my opinion better than Immaculata's. We were able to move the ball against Phillipsburg, too. We've gone up against a few teams that are very good defensively."

This being a local rivalry in which many of the players are familiar with each other, Frauenheim wasn't surprised B-R came out and competed with such ferocity. The Panthers, of course, had also done the same with every other prior opponent, except for a 35-0 loss to Watchung Hills.

"The schools are only a mile apart," said Frauenheim, "and a lot of the kids know each other. So it's quite a rivalry. But I came into the game knowing Bridgewater is a good football team, a lot better than their record."

Immaculata missed an ideal scoring opportunity on its ini-facets of the sport and gave thoughtful responses to all questions.

"Driving is normally my strength," she replied when asked which club is her favorite, "but lately my putter has been a pretty good friend."

Other tidbits from the sweet-swinging 36-year-old Swede: "When hitting with your driver, the key to control is hit it like a wedge," and to "Be relaxed - that's how to generate power."

After 10-year-old Alice Chen and Betsy Armstrong, 12, had bravely stepped forward to take a few shots under the watchful gaze of Sorenstam, who immediately helped both with some quick tips, she was asked at what age it was appropriate to introduce the sport to children.

Sorenstam, who was 12 when she began playing, replied it depends largely on whether a child seems to have a genuine interest in learning the game and that no pressure should be placed on them to do so.

'Remember, it's all about having fun," she said. "Let them hit as long as they enjoy it."

She also discussed strategic principles of "working the ball," hitting from left to right or vice versa, and the importance of the positioning of the body, feet and hands, and also further

Moore retired a few years ago but still gets out there on weekends to see some local football action.

"I even go to some practices, but now I can leave and go home without having any headaches," he said with a laugh.

Following the autograph session and clinic, Sorenstam talked briefly with the press, and made it clear that while this was an enjoyable diversion from the competitive stress of the LPGA Tour, it was also very much about business.

Among the top attributes of the Neshanic Valley GC, which opened a couple years ago as the county's newest public facility, is its extensive Callaway Learning Center

'I've been with Callaway almost 15 years," said Sorenstam, "and this is a big account for them, so for me to come here and help them out is very satisfying. But this is also about giving back and seeing all the people and to help out the junior players, and I feel I have a responsibility to do that.'

Seconds later she was whisked away into a waiting black Lincoln Signature with New York license plates. Her gear was piled into the trunk, and one county sherif?'s car, lights flashing, led the Lincoln out of the parking area while another followed, escorting it up to Route 78.

an option quarterback is going to take during a game.

"No matter what kind of offense you run, you have to have an offensive line that can make it work, and we've been having difficulty with that. We're just trying to do what the kids can do best, and go from there."

With few exceptions, the Panthers weren't going anywhere on this chilly night. Facing a 7-0 deficit, they did take the second-half kickoff and march 64 yards deep into Immaculata territory, eating almost eight minutes off the clock, but a fourth-down incomplete pass turned the ball back over to the Spartans.

tial possession when, after marching 47 yards, junior quarterback Frank DeNick's pass from the 11-yard line was intercepted by Michael Rice. who made his fourth pick of the year.

The Spartans later drove almost the length of the field in 17 plays before the B-R defense stiffened and Michael Brownett came in to attempt a 27-yard field goal, which sailed wide against a gusty wind.

Albert, who totaled 146 yards on 25 carries, finally put points on the board with 44 seconds remaining in the half, rambling in from six yards out to cap a 46-yard march.

Panthers ready for title shot

By ALLAN CONOVER Sports Editor

The only matchup that seemed truly appropriate has become reality.

Following dominating semifivictories, nal-round Bridgewater-Raritan High and the Pingry School will tangle for the second straight year in Somerset County the Tournament championship game 2 p.m. today on Basilone Memorial Field's artificial turf in Bridgewater.

"We just wanted the best two teams in the final," said Bridgewater-Raritan junior Alyssa Dragon, "and these are definitely the two that deserve to be there. We're looking forward to a rematch with Pingry."

The second-seeded Panthers, who tied for the title in 2004 and fell to Pingry 2-1 in overtime a year ago, certainly weren't about to be denied a third successive berth in the SCT final as they crushed Bernards 5-1 in last Saturday's semi. No. 1 seed Pingry was just as overwhelming during a 6-0 rout of Hillsborough.

Clearly, Bridgewater-Raritan (14-1-1) and Pingry (14-0) stand head-and-shoulders over the rest of the county competition at the moment. "I think both SCT FIELD HOCKEY programs are tured," said B-R Head Coach Kathie DeBonis. "We both have quite a few kids who play out-Sbrilli (4 G, 4 A). side high school and that helps,

"We're excited for a good game," said DeBonis. "It really too. It breeds a passion for the will be a battle of wills and It doesn't seem beyond reawhoever might get the momentum swinging their way. It's son to anticipate a tightly-conwho can deal with the pressure tested duel similar to last year, when the Big Blue eventually the best and who has the least came away with the victory. amount of unforced errors. Both squads are loaded with

"We have a fairly young team proven veteran talent, strength but some of the girls have experience in big games and one like this has just that much "They're still very fast on more pressure to it. But we just want to go out there and play it like any other game."

As for the Panthers enjoying the home-field advantage, it doesn't necessarily play a huge role in the outcome.

"It's always good to have the home field," said Dragon, "and we are a turf team. But it didn't make much of a difference in last year's game."

The Panthers took some time to get their game in gear against sixth-seeded Bernards (12-3) but their ability to capitalize on penalty corners they converted four into goals was crucial in the semifinal clash at Montgomery High. Fabrizio led the attack with two goals while Alicia Perrine (one assist), Alyssa Dragon (one assist) and Lauren Sbrilli also found the net.

"We dominated a good portion of the game," said DeBonis, "but Bernards had its moments when they broke up the plan. In this game, you can't overlook anybody. You can't take anyone for granted. You can dominate a game and lose 1-0."

Goalie Perrine made a superb stop in the game's early moments but the Panthers gradually gained control and got on the board with 14:08 remaining in the half when Sbrilli scored off a feed from Perrine.

Two minutes later Dragon, who's been shifting between center midfield and left forward much of the season, scored off a rebound and B-R added another shot 45 seconds before the intermission for a 3-0 halftime cushion.

"It was a pretty even game for a while," said Dragon, "but once we started scoring, we really had the momentum going our way.
