Professors receiving national honors

Two professors at Rutgers University and one professor at the UMDNJ-Robert Wood Johnson Medical School are among 449 scientists named 2006 fellows by the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Among these fellows are Amy Cohen, professor of mathematics at Rutgers; Gaetano T. Montelione, professor of molecular biology and biochemistry at Rutgers; and Ann M. Stock, professor of biochemistry at the medical school.

Montelione and Stock are also resident faculty members of the joint Rutgers/UMDNJ Center for Advanced Biotechnology and Medicine.

The preeminent U.S. scientific organization each year selects fellows based on their efforts in advancing science or fostering applications considered scientifically or socially distinguished. It cited Cohen "for respected research in partial differential equations, and for effective service to the profession in scholarly publications, in education, and in advancing the status of women"; Montelione "for exemplary achievements in the development and applications of NMR methods to study biological structure and interactions and establishing the new field of structural genomics"; and Stock "for outstanding contributions to our understanding of protein structure/function and cell signaling mechanisms and for advancing graduate education."

All three will be honored Feb. 17 at the association's annual meeting in San Francisco, Calif. The AAAS is the world's largest general scientific society and publisher of the prestigious journal Science.

Abby Landau, 16, is homeschooled by her mother, Mary Alice Landau, in their Bridgewater home. Children from about 40 other families in the area are being taught at home.

Parents: There's no place like home for an education

By ALLISON ELYSE GUALTIERI
Staff Writer

BRIDGEWATER — As many students fret about missing homework and getting to class on time, Stephan and Mary Alice Landau's children don't have those worries. They just go downstairs.

The Landau family is just one of the county's homeschooling families, and their children — 18-year-old Daniel, 16-year-old Abby, 13-year-old Ruth, and 10-year-old Dov — have learned primarily in a downstairs room filled with books, maps and a computer.

Though Daniel is now a student at Fairleigh Dickinson University in Madison, the other three children are still learning and being taught at home, as are over 90 other children from about 40 families in the area.

It's a decision the Landau family made a long time ago. Though Stephan, who runs his own business, and Mary Alice grew up in the area, they were living in Maryland when they began to explore homeschooling.

"When my son (Daniel) got to be preschool aged, I started doing research on schooling options, and home-schooling seemed to be the best," said Mary Alice, who does the majority of teaching. "I'm not tied to someone else's plan that may or may not be right for your child."

New Jersey is one of the easiest states to homeschool in, according to the Homeschool Legal Defense Association, a national legal advocacy organization. Parents do not have to submit curriculum or lesson plans to their local districts, or even notify their local district.

Cyanami site to be studied

By AMY S. BOBROWSKI
Staff Writer

BRIDGEWATER — In the next six months, a consulting firm will complete an extensive study to determine the best end use for the former American Cyanamid site.

Wyeth Holding Corporation, the property's current owner, has proposed the creation of an 18-hole links-style golf course and an ecological nature preserve, but the township wants to be sure that development is in the best interest of the municipality.

At its meeting on Monday, the township council awarded a professional services contract to the PMK Group, of Cranford, to develop a document outlining the remediation scope of the site and an analysis determining the best end use for the land.

The property, about 535 acres bound by Main Street to the north, the Raritan River to the south, Interstate 287 to the east and the Raritan River to the west, was used for chemical and pharmaceutical manufacturing operations for 75 years by American Cyanamid. Production at the site stopped in 1999 and plant buildings were demolished in 2000. The property was designated a Superfund site in 1982 and Wyeth took control of the land and remediation in 1994.

Parts of the remediation process are on hold as the state Department of Environmental Protection completes a feasibility study on how to best clean up the property.

The request for proposals issued by the township in late October indicated the forthcoming report by PMK will include the status of the remediation conducted by Wyeth.

Women's group ready for move to new home

METUCHEN — Inside a modest home a caring group of social workers and counselors provide therapy and support to women, teens and girls struggling with issues big and small.

After 31 years Women Helping Women has outgrown its home. The staff and volunteers are raising money to build a facility equipped to handle twice the 5,000 people now served by the agency.

The Provident Bank Foundation has provided a three-year $45,000 grant that will put Women Helping Women on a solid path toward achieving that goal. The foundation helps fund philanthropy in communities where the bank has offices.

"We are thrilled with the grant," said Melissa Higgins, executive director of Women Helping Women. "We are grateful to have the foundation's support and hope to continue our relationship with Provident."

Women Helping Women was founded by social workers from the Rutgers Committee on Mental Health and National Council of Jewish Women. The goal of the program was to provide an outlet for women in the midst of life-changing experiences.

Today the facility still offers therapy and support groups as well as a whole host of other services, including a telephone help line, legal clinics and community education workshops. It also has pro-

Cohen, who joined the Rutgers faculty in 1972, has done research on partial differential equations used to describe physical phenomena in particle physics, astrophysics and fiber optic communications. She also has developed teaching techniques that make classroom instruction in the physical sciences more engaging, effective and satisfying for students and faculty. She is helping future high school math teachers understand mathematics more deeply so they can communicate more flexibly with students.

Montelione, a Rutgers faculty member since 1989, is an expert in using nuclear magnetic resonance to study protein structures. Stock, who joined the UMDNJ-Robert Wood Johnson Medical School in 1991, studies information processing pathways within bacterial cells that enable bacteria to respond to changes in their environment. These molecular level signaling systems provide novel targets for developing antimicrobial drugs to combat infectious diseases.

While there are several different philosophies about homeschooling — from unschooling, which is completely child-directed, to rigorous curricula — the Landaus said they have a definite plan, but understand the need for flexibility.

"We're not saying every day, 'What should we study?' But sometimes plans go awry," said Stephan. Sometimes learning a particular subject can take longer or less time than expected, for example, and sometimes lessons present themselves in unexpected ways.

"We don't really compartmentalize, this is school, this is life. School is a part of life," he said, and homeschooling allows them to adapt school to life.

While school at home might sound like a vacation to some, it was actually the opposite for the Landau's children when they were younger.

"We had much shorter summer vacations. Six weeks, that was it, because I had no interest in reteaching it," said Mary Alice. "I never really let them know that."

Like any other school, there are field trips — the family has watched re-enactments for their study of history — and gym class, better known as karate taken through Branchburg recreation.

There is even prom. Across the state, groups of families that homeschool have gotten together to put on the rite-of-passage party, and last year Abby attended one of the two in the state.

Sometimes, homeschooling can be a challenge. There is picking reading materials and putting together lessons, finding activities and, of course, the teaching. The undertaking is a big time commitment, and sometimes,

Stephan said, the house can seem too small.

Local support groups are important to homeschoolers. The Somerset Christian Parents Educators Association, which also runs the cooperative Friendship Learning Center during the school year, allows the Landaus to come together and exchange ideas, questions, and share materials with other homeschooling parents.

"To homeschool successfully, you really have to be part of a homeschool group, because then you're not a lone wolf. You don't have to figure it out on your own," she said.

Finding educational materials has become easier in the digital age. Curricula and materials can be ordered online, as well as through magazines and catalogues and at homeschooling fairs. Teaching materials aren't just school textbooks, but often textbooks that are different from those found in public school.

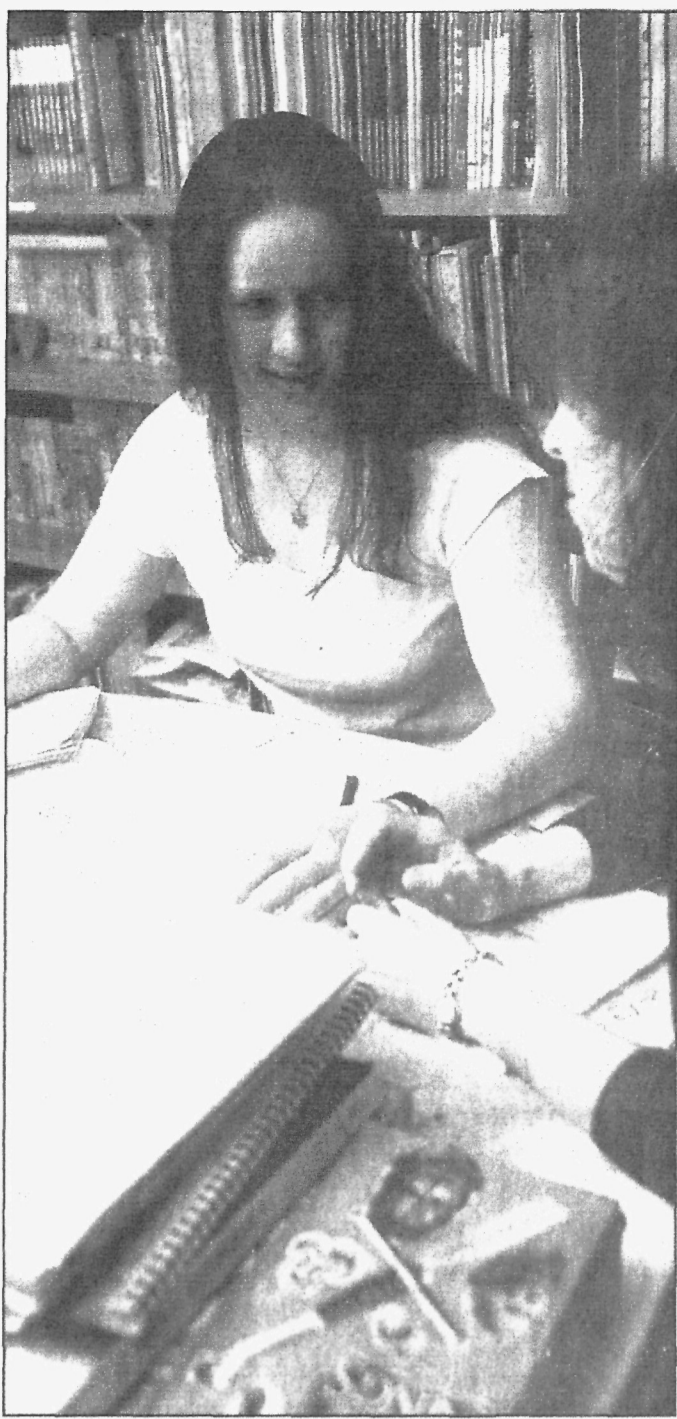

"The biggest way (materials are different) is that most homeschoolers are of a religious bent, and (materials) reflect a biblical worldview," she said. "It's not scripture verses on every page, but it does reflect that."

The questions homeschoolers seem to get most often are those about socialization. The Landaus said that through the group, as well as town sports, scouting, church Sunday school and youth groups, dance and music classes, and other activities, socialization isn't a concern. One parent in Chester holds teen parties that draw 20 to 40 children, Mary Alice said.

"It's hard to be isolated, really," she said. "You have to choose to be isolated."

"If it's important to the parent that their kid not be socially backward, then they include that," said Stephan.

To the Landaus, homeschooling, despite its time and energy commitment, was the best option for their family, allowing their children to get individual attention. Homeschooling isn't guaranteed to make children smarter, but the Landaus said it does not hurt, and many easily get into colleges. "There's no guarantee, but you're stacking the deck in your favor," he said.

options of the township with regard to the cleanup, an analysis of the benefits to and liability of the township for each potential use, an analysis of the rights of the township and obligations of Wyeth with regard to the remediation, recommended questions the township should ask Wyeth about the remediation and the land and recommended actions to the township "that would insure the best possible use of the Wyeth land from an economic, environmental and recreation perspective," said the request for proposals.

Township Administrator Jim Naples said PMK is expected to present its report to the township council within six months.

PMK's fees will be paid by Wyeth, which has posted a $40,000 escrow for the services.

The Department of Environmental Protection is expected to complete its study on the cleanup by the end of the year. Over the course of the next year, the department along with the Environmental Protection Agency will review the plan, hold public hearings and issue an updated Record of Decisions or a remediation strategy.

Wyeth's time line indicates that the cleanup could be complete by 2011 with redevelopment of the site slated to finish in 2012. Located today on the cleaned up portion of the property is the Somerset Patriots Ballpark and Bridgewater Promenade Shopping Center.

grams geared toward bolstering girls' self-esteem, body image and peer relationships.

"There are other women's organizations but they don't usually offer all the range of services," Higgins said. "Women Helping Women is the only organization providing therapy on all the issues related to women and their families, as well as all the support services [and] legal clinics."

She recalled one woman who delivered a speech at the group's "Starry Night" gala. A victim of childhood sexual abuse, the woman had been gripped with fear and anxiety and was afraid to leave her home. After receiving therapy this woman has returned to work as a full-time physician's assistant.

Several powerful people have lent their support to the group, among them Mary Jo Codey, wife of state Senate President and former Gov. Richard Codey. She is an outspoken advocate of recognizing postpartum depression, a disease she personally battled.

Immaculata runs over Wave for title

PISCATAWAY — Following a game plan that had been unchallenged in its effectiveness in their 11 previous victories, the Spartans completed their business in perfect fashion Saturday.

Relying on its punishing ground game fueled by a talented and experienced front six and sparked by the running of sophomore Theo Riddick, Immaculata High's football squad held off Delbarton 22-14 for the Non-Public Group III crown 22-14 before 8,000 fans at Rutgers Stadium for the program's second undefeated season.

With its defense once again grudgingly yielding ground — this time against the same quarterback than had burned it a year ago on a 41-14 loss — Immaculata finished off a 12-0 campaign.

"I'm very proud of all the kids," Frauenheim said. "We played a very sound football game against a very, very good Delbarton team, and we carried out our objectives."

"We controlled the ball, we controlled the clock, we did reasonable well against (Green Wave quarterback Jack) McBride and we played mistake-free football on special teams with the exception of the one fumble. I thought we played very well."

Using 12 straight running plays to cover 48 yards with Riddick carrying seven times for 32 yards, the Spartans snapped the scoreless dual with 3:01 to go in the half when Riddick (31 carries for 217 yards and 3 touchdowns) went in from the 2 on a third-and-goal situation, one play after the sophomore was pushed out of bounds on a sweep that gained 6 yards.

After getting one first down Immaculata was faced with a fourth-and-fourth situation at the 16 and was going to go for the first down, but a delay penalty altered that plan. Instead, Frauenheim sent out Mike Brownnett for a 38-yard field goal attempt, and Brownnett drilled it for a 9-0 lead with 8:04 left in the period.

Delbarton (8-4) followed that score with a its best drive of the game, traveling 82 yards in seven plays and using just 2:04 off the clock. The Green Wave scored when McBride hit Andrew Bell in stride down the middle for a 24-yard scoring pass. Bell's PAT kick made it 9-7.

It didn't take the Spartans long to respond. In fact, it took a mere 20 seconds in game time. After taking over at the 30 following the kick-off, Immaculata was called for a procedure penalty, but Riddick then sprinted 75 yards off tackle for the touchdown to make it 15-7.

Following the ensuing kick-off, Delbarton picked up a first down, but then couldn't come back from a fumble it lost and recovered, leading to another short punt as Immaculata took over at its

Penalized for holding on a flanker reverse, the Spartans looked like they would have to punt when DeNick was run out of bounds for a 1-yard loss. A spearing penalty, however, gave Immaculata just enough for a first down at the 49.

It proved to be the game's most costly penalty as Riddick took a handoff on a sweep left, found a seam behind a finish block from Rice and bolted 51 yards for his third TD of the game. Brownnett finally converted a PAT to make it 22-7 with 1:22 left in the third period.

From there on the ball was almost entirely in the hands of the Green Wave attack as they ran 25 plays to just eight — two of which were kneel-downs at the end — for Immaculata. At one point the Spartans had run 48 plays to 26 for Delbarton.

Delbarton followed Riddick's third touchdown with a 79-yard march that took 13 plays to complete. McBride completed five of seven passes for 68 yards and ran four times for 20 yards as the Green Wave overcame two penalties for 16 yards.

The points came on a 16-yard pass from McBride to Max Seligman, who made a leaping grab at the back of the end zone, although the replay showed Seligman stepped on the end line while making the catch. With no review the play stood, and after Bell's PAT it was a 22-14 game with 8:21 left.

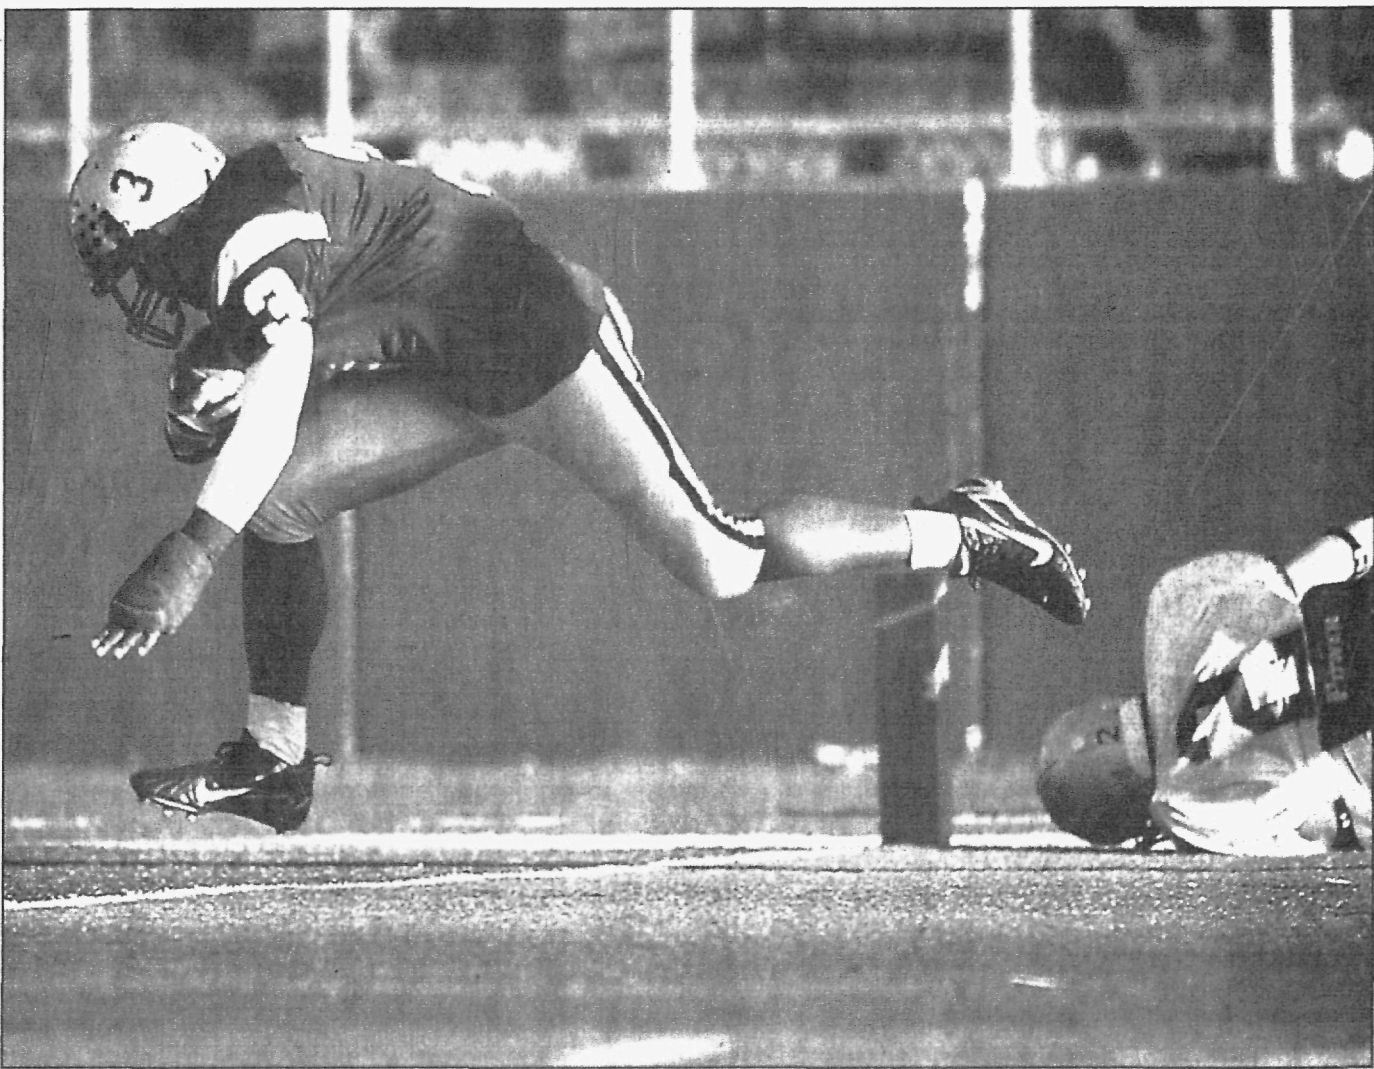

With Riddick on the bench fighting dehydration, Albert took Riddick's spot as deep man on the kickoff return unit, but after a 12-yard return fumbled and the Green Wave recovered at the 22.

Immaculata's defense then delivered its biggest stop of the game as it forced Delbarton into a fourth-and-three situation when Mike Kuhn blitzed McBride from his blind side, forced a fumble and Fisher recovered at the 21 with 6:30 left.

The Spartans followed with a possession that picked up one first down and took almost three minutes off the clock, but 3:22 to play and getting the ball at his 35, McBride had more than enough time to put his team in a position to force overtime.

Moving to the 47 on two McBride runs, Delbarton had a 17-yard gain on a pass from McBride to Seligman erased for having an illegal receiver downfield, but an 11-yard completion to White and a highly questionable pass interference call against the Spartans gave the Wave a first down at the Immaculata 33.

McBride followed by hooking up with an open White on a swing pass and White took it to the 18. McBride ran for 4 yards. Following an incomplete pass, McBride's final throw was intercepted by Riddick in the end zone.

Immaculata High's Theo Riddick reaches the end zone after out-racing Delbarton's Murphy McCurdy to the corner to complete a 75-yard touchdown run in the third quarter of the Spartans' 22-14 victory Saturday in the Non-Public Group III title game at Rutgers Stadium.

Riddick's performance makes the difference

PISCATAWAY — Every championship squad usually has that one difference-maker, and for the Immaculata High football team sophomore Theo Riddick fills that roll brilliantly.

With another spectacular performance that included 217 yards on a season-high 31 carries and all three Spartan touchdowns, Riddick lifted Immaculata past Delbarton 22-14 for the Non-Public Group III crown Saturday.

Twice Riddick delivered daggers to Delbarton's comeback hopes — the first when he went 75 yards one play after the Green Wave closed to within 9-7 and the second a 51-yard sprint that gave the Spartans a two-touchdown cushion.

Defensively, Riddick was in on eight tackles, and he came off the bench after battling dehydration for nearly a quarter to seal the victory with an interception in the end zone with 57 seconds to play.

After sharing work load all season when he and Riddick became the first two Immaculata runners to surpass 1,000 yards in the same year, A. J. Albert gave way to the standout sophomore in the title game and watched him run.

"We all understand what a special player Theo is, and you have to use a special player," he said. "He doesn't carry only 10 times a game because he has that ability to break a long one any time he carries, so you have to give him the ball."

For senior tackle Ryan Bennett, it's the sounds that Riddick inspires once he gets past the line of scrimmage that he experiences more than the sight.

"I never really get to see him get through at the point of the attack, but you get four steps into the play you can hear our crowd yelling and you know Theo's gone," he said. "He's an all-state player, and he's only going to get better."

Pierce Frauenheim, who had seen his share of outstanding backs during his 41 seasons as head coach, knows what he has in Riddick.

"Theo's right up there with the best we've had," he said. "He is the finishing piece. He gets some daylight and he can go. The game plan was Theo and A.J., but we probably gave the ball more to Theo than we expected."

It was certainly more than what the sophomore expected.

"There's no way I thought I'd carry that many times," Riddick said. "That's why I became dehydrated. I mean I was hydrated well enough, but I was just got so caught up the game I couldn't breathe."

Riddick accomplished what he did offensively in less than three quarters of work, but the extra work took its toll. His 51-yard scoring run came with 1:22 to go in the third period, but that proved to be his final carry.

"Theo had a huge part in the game," senior guard Jack Rice said. "Without him playing in the fourth quarter, you saw how much harder it was to move the ball. He hits the holes so quickly, and has such great vision. He has the ability to turn nothing into something big."

Scoring on two of his final three carries of the game, Riddick set single-season school records on both of them.

The 75-yarder — his longest scoring run of the year — gave him the single-season school mark for yardage as he surpassed the 1,293 registered by Kelms Amoo-Achampong in 2004, while his 51-yarder extended the rushing record and was his 23rd touchdown, breaking the standard set by Josh Morrison in 2000.

"The first (long) one was the same play we ran on penalty (false start). I saw the safety cheating, so I just cut it back, and I saw Jack Rice sitting there with a block and cut behind it. The second one my fullback T.J. Fabiano cleared out the cornerback and all I had to do was beat the safety."

"Once I broke through on the first one I was thinking I was going to take it to the house, and I was able to get in. The second one I didn't think I had enough energy, and if I got caught I got caught, but I didn't."

Riddick then took a seat on the bench until Delbarton moved to the Immaculata 18 with 1:27 to go. He came on to tackle quarterback Jack McBride after a 4-yard gain, and then picked off the pass in the end zone.

"I was sitting there and my Mom actually told me to go back in, so I went to the trainer and he said it was OK, and then I went to the assistant coach and he put me back in," he said.

"What happened was my cornerback Mike Sena jammed the receiver at the line while he was trying to do a double move and pushed him out of bounds. I guess McBride was threw it up trying to get pass interference. I knew I'd better catch it or I'd be in trouble."

When it was over, the one daydream he had allowed himself to have had become a reality and it had nothing to do with his numbers.

"You always have that image of how you want things to go, and my only image was celebrating with my teammates after the game," he said.

Some how, some way B-R's Kassel puts ball in net

BRIDGEWATER — Every once in a while a special athlete comes along who can lift his team to championships despite opposing teams devising every conceivable defense to stop him.

Bridgewater-Raritan High junior Matt Kassel fits quite nicely into that category as a soccer player.

One year after providing the biggest punch in the attack on a senior-dominated state championship squad, Kassel this fall put the Panthers on his back and carried them to their second straight North Jersey Section 2 Group 4 crown and the Skyland Conference-Delaware East Division title with an outstanding display of shot-making ability.

Scoring 32 times and setting up 13 other goals, Kassel repeatedly overcame opponents that knew he was the Panthers' greatest weapon but were powerless to stop him most of the time.

"I think all three years teams have designed defenses to stop Matt," said Head Coach Rich Szeles, whose Panthers were 18-6-1 this fall. "All three years he's taken a beating, but he just keeps playing. He's just a very competitive kid. He loves to win at whatever he does."

"Matt is not going on the field without people knowing who he is and where he is. If I was coaching against him I'd make sure I have someone on him. A lot of times he has two people on him. Teams will mark him with one guy and then bring someone else over."

It's a situation Kassel has learned to thrive in and excel.

"As a freshman I was small and wasn't as strong as the people I was playing, but as I've gotten older I've gotten stronger," he said. "I do get roughed up, and this year was definitely the most physical with two or three guys on me all the time. It was tough, but I thought I was able to fight through those defenses and get position."

Those who follow soccer know how difficult scoring goals can be. It's more than just getting shots. It's having the ability to finish. For most players a 10- to 15-goal season is considered outstanding. For Kassel, 25-goal campaigns have been commonplace.

After netting 13 as a freshman, he connected for 27 goals a year ago and now has career total of 72, which could already be a school record for boys in the Bridgewater-Raritan High district, and that includes the years during which it was split into East and West.

"Matt is one of the best people I've ever coached — he may be the best," Szeles said. "His overall understanding of the game, his skill level, his strength, his ability to use both feet without his opponents knowing, and his ability in the air all make him the kind of player he is."

"And he's always displayed a higher level of sportsmanship on the field. Despite what teams do to him he keeps his composure. I think he's only gotten one yellow card the whole time I've worked with him, and that was after (the defender) grabbed his shirt and tore it."

While Kassel tried his hand at baseball and basketball growing up, his feet won out with soccer, the sport he's been playing the longest at the highest level.

Getting his start as a 5-year-old by playing against older children, according to his own recollection, Kassel has been playing club soccer for 10 years and this fall helped the Red Bulls (New York) squad win the State Cup in the 18-and-under division and advance to the national tournament in Florida.

"At one point I had to choose between soccer and baseball, and my freshman year I had to choose between soccer and basketball," he said. "I prefer soccer because it's a team game. It's fun with its constant movement. There are no time-outs or any of that stuff. It's also fun to watch on TV."

"It's different between high school and club. In high school anyone can go out and you can get a lot of athletes that play other sports. Club soccer is where you get guys that only play that sport and play it year-round. Club is a much higher level of play with better players around you supporting you. High school is more for fun and playing with your friends."

While Kassel may be Bridgewater-Raritan's best ever at putting the ball in the net, he's also the consummate team player, more satisfied with what the Panthers accomplished this season than with the numbers he produced.

"The season we had felt pretty good," he said. "It was a good season for the team. A lot of us didn't expect to be where we were considering we lost so many guys from our state championship team, but we had a pretty good season."

He also understood his importance to that success.

"I knew I had to have a big year for us to go anywhere," he said. "Everyone was telling me I had to step up this year, and I thought I stepped up pretty well."

Kassel's last two seasons have been spectacular, but in reality almost didn't come to fruition. Two summers ago, he visited England looking into the possibility of playing there. Fortunately for Bridgewater-Raritan, he returned home.

"We would've done things differently without Matt," Szeles said. "We have spent a lot of time getting Matt the ball because it's evident he can score. With Matt we play a certain style. Without him we would have trouble scoring goals. He puts the ball in the back of the net better than anyone I've had. He makes the difference."

Now he has a chance to reach 100 career goals, which he can accomplish with what has been a typical season the past two years.

"I think he can be even better next year because he's going to physically stronger," Szeles said. "I think that's the only area he needs to get better in. He reads the game so well. He passes well, and of course he can score."

"I talked to Coach about (the 100 goals) after the season, and that would be a great accomplishment for me, but it's more important to me how we do as a team next year," Kassel said. "It would definitely be nice to score 100 goals. It's very important to my team to be able to score, but at the same time I want to be able to set up other players. I think assists should count the same amount as goals."

Kassel figures to have a bright future in college and has already started the process of making a selection, something he could have done before his final high school season.

"I've been getting recruited pretty heavily," he said. "I want to play in the Atlantic Coast Conference. I think that has the best competition. We've been talking about making an early decision, but whatever happens, happens. I have to make a few visits, and then I'll be able to make my choice."
