Jan. 1, 2007: It's a girl!

By ALLISON ELYSE GUALTIERI
Staff Writer

SOMERVILLE — Hilda Julda watched the world ring in the New Year from her hospital bed in the Somerset Medical Center maternity ward. New York, Los Angeles, Miami, Mexico, Puerto Rico — 2007 was starting, but her baby had yet to arrive.

Finally, at 5:26 a.m., Jennifer, Julda's second child, was born by Caesarian section to become the first baby of 2007 born in Somerset County.

Jennifer's father, Moises Diaz, said that the two were excited to have the first baby in the county. The Bound Brook family knew that they would be the first, but it was still an exciting moment.

Diaz said that the two arrived at the hospital at about 4 p.m. on New Year's Eve. Jennifer, who was expected to be born today, made things a bit difficult.

"She was having a problem, because the head was too big," said Diaz. "Three hours later, the doctor told us she needed it (a c-section)."

Jennifer weighed 8 pounds, 11.5 ounces, and joins Diaz, Julda, and 6-year-old big sister

Stephanie. At the hospital Tuesday, Julda said through Diaz that she knew ahead of time that the baby would be a girl.

The two settled on the name Jennifer on Tuesday, and baby and mother were resting at the hospital. Jennifer sported a pink and blue cap as the proud parents spent time with her.

As the first baby born in 2007 at the hospital, Jennifer got a $100 gift basket from Babies "R" Us filled with baby necessities as part of their first baby of the year contest.

Sicilian native is honored by his hometown

EDISON — Emanuel di Pasquale, who was born in poverty in Sicily and rose to become a professor of English at Middlesex County College, was honored by his native village with its "Ragusani nel mondo" award.

The ceremony was held in the piazza of San Giovanni Battista, where thousands of people gathered to celebrate the six honorees who returned to Ragusa from their homes around the world.

"They honored us as children of Ragusa who left the island but did well in the new world," said di Pasquale, who emigrated to America at age 13.

"The whole town turned out to cheer us, church bells rang in the piazza, a band played and there was live television coverage," he said. "It was a glorious and festive event and we were very proud to come home."

Among those honored at the September ceremony was Susan Sarandon, the actress and activist who graduated from Edison High School. Her grandfather is a Sicilian native.

The other honorees included the man who designed the statue of the bull symbolizing Wall Street, a physician who

Historic churches subject of area man's latest book

By JENNIFER ROSENBAUM

Nine years ago, when Frank Greenagel couldn't get out to the southwest for his yearly backpacking trip because of constraints at work, he needed something new to pass his free time. During those annual trips, Greenagel, a former college professor of psychology in Minnesota and Colorado and now a general manager of a company called Guided Learning, would photograph magnificent cliff dwellings and countless other outdoor subjects.

So, the first year he didn't go on his trip, he began shooting local churches in Hunterdon County where he resides, simply because "I wanted to take great photographs," he said.

But somewhere along the 67-year-old's endeavor, his intention of only capturing fascinating architecture was altered.

"At a certain point, my goal changed from taking great photographs to taking social and economic history."

Since the very beginning of his "hobby" until now, Greenagel, who lives in Phillipsburg, has written eight books. His latest offering, which was published by the History Press, is entitled "Historic Churches of Somerset County New Jersey."

In his book, Greenagel documents 18th and 19th century churches and meetinghouses within the county. Through his fieldwork and research, Greenagel has documented trends in the way churches and meetinghouses were constructed and materials that were used, which he believes can classify the social status of the congregation.

Greenagel sights St. John's church in Somerville, an Episcopal congregation founded in 1850, that the self-acclaimed sociologist and anthropologist says in his most recent book is "interesting to see a church with battlements, an element of the very early Gothic but not much in vogue by the end of the century."

When he first began taking photographs of the churches, Greenagel never imagined his project becoming such a vast undertaking. Currently, he has researched 1,200 churches or meetinghouses of approximately 1,350 in the state.

"I never thought there would be so many (churches)."

Churches

a modest Greenagel said.

The time commitment to his project exemplifies Greenagel's dedication to his ambition as well. Greenagel hopes to write a book on each county and their historic churches. When describing Greenagel's intention, he knows he can't preserve the churches, but he can capture them. Greenagel believes that old churches are being threatened and may be lost to development.

Greenagel hopes to document the differences in architecture and reflect on what the buildings meant to the respective societies they served.

"The churches differ remarkably in architecture," he said. "You being to wonder why they are so different."

For example, Greenagel points out that there are several stone churches in the Somerville area, but fewer in the southern part of New Jersey. During his research, Greenagel has also considered many other factors when learning about the history of a church. He wants to know whether the land was desirable when the congregation was able to first obtain the land, what the building of the church was used for prior to the purpose of a meetinghouse, how large the building is, whether the architect was local and if those planning to build the church had an architect at all?

Greenagel's research process is extensive, though, he said he only works on the project when he isn't busy. He said he sometimes will take a few days to travel down to the location of a church, take a few shots and find out what he can about its history using the local library.

Other times, while working on the text content of his research, he will spend 24 hours writing because he said it's easy to keep the thoughts flowing.

As Greenagel looks forward to the completion of his project, he said he first must tackle what he considers to be two of the most difficult counties in the state: Monmouth and Ocean.

"All the counties have had 'history of' books which has a 'church' section listing the churches within the county, except for Monmouth and Ocean," he said.

But Greenagel has spent nine years accomplishing his objective and won't let the lack of a church inventory get in his way. He said he is up to the task.

"Historic Churches of Somerset County New Jersey" is available at local bookstores and on Amazon.com.

now lives in India, an inventor from Venezuela and a businessman from Northern New Jersey.

"My father had died suddenly, leaving my mother with four children," di Pasquale said of his childhood in Sicily.

"I was the youngest and my mother thought that there would be no opportunities for me if we were to stay," he said. "We made our way to the new world, leaving my brother and two sisters, and settled in Tarrytown, N.Y."

Years later, after he became an American citizen, di Pasquale brought his sisters to the United States. His brother, who attended the September festivities, has been a baker in Ragusa for over 60 years.

"I learned English pretty much out of my love for the language and the loving ways of American education," the professor said.

He has published poems in English, Italian and a Sicilian dialect. All three languages are incorporated in "Na Vota," a book of poems about Sicily and Ragusa that was published in 2005 and led to his receiving the award in Ragusa. He also is among the editors of "The Poets of New Jersey" anthology.

Di Pasquale began teaching at MCC in 1968 after receiving a bachelor's degree from Adelphi University and a master's degree from New York University.

— Schedule Flexibility: flexible, part-time, job sharing, compressed work weeks — all ways to ease the schedule conflicts that parents face.

— Telecommuting: whether it is an everyday arrangement, available on an as-needed basis or somewhere in between, telecommuting is another way to provide flexibility to workers.

— Child Care Programs: supporting essential child care through financial assistance programs, on-site or off-site day care, after-school and summer programs, as well as sick and emergency child care programs that allow parents to have one less thing to worry about in their day.

MIDDLESEX

Lisa Tomilio, 26, of Piscataway was arrested Dec. 26 at Drug Fair on Union Avenue and charged with simple assault.

She allegedly punched a teenage girl in the face and pulled the girl's hair while police were taking a report of a shoplifting at 10:04 a.m. The suspect and the teen had to be pulled apart by patrolmen on the scene.

Tomilio, identified in a police news release as a Drug Fair employee, was released on her own recognizance pending a Municipal Court hearing. The store manager declined to press shoplifting charges against the teen.

A total of $9,000 in jewelry and cash was stolen Dec. 19 in a burglary of a house on Pershing Avenue. Police said the burglars pushed in the basement door to gain entry.

A green 1999 Yamaha ATV was reported stolen Dec. 27 from behind D&B Auto Parts on Lincoln Boulevard. According to police, a padlock was cut so the chain could be pulled off the rear wheels and the ATV carted away. The ATV is valued at $3,500, police said.

Jessica Hamilton, 18, of New York state was arrested Dec. 28 and charged with driving while intoxicated following a traffic stop at Union and Hazelwood avenues at 2:29 a.m. She also was cited for allegedly altering the date of birth on her driver's license. Hamilton was released on her own recognizance pending a Municipal Court hearing.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD

One man was killed and another seriously injured in separate pedestrian accidents over Christmas weekend.

Vasantpur Swami, 53, of Piscataway was walking to the White Castle restaurant on the South Plainfield side of Stelton Road around 10:30 p.m. Dec. 22. A 1990

Oldsmobile Cutlass driven northbound by Consandra Bugg, 31, of Plainfield hit Swami as he was walking northbound.

Swami was treated at the scene but died of his injuries at Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital in New Brunswick.

Robert Stark, 50, of Dunellen parked his car at the Cedarcroft Bible Chapel on Kenyon Avenue at 3:15 p.m. Dec. 23. A 2004 GMC Envoy driven by Deborah Winters, 44, of South Plainfield turned off eastbound Rahway Avenue onto Kenyon and hit Stark as he was crossing the street to a relative's house.

Stark was taken to Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital with head and leg injuries. Preliminary results indicated that he was under the influence of alcohol, according to a release from South Plainfield police about his accident.

Investigations into both accidents are ongoing. Anyone with information should contact Lt. Kevin Murtagh at (908) 226-7679.

Dunellen writer has released second book

Jennifer Troulis, a resident of Dunellen, released "Penelope and Priscilla and the City of the Banished," the second book in her middle grade children's series, the Penelope and Priscilla series.

In the book, readers are taken on an adventure with identical twin sisters, Penelope and Priscilla, as they are faced with challenges related to growing up as well as battling evil forces.

Troulis, who is also an artist, self-published the book under the name of Twin Monkeys

Press. She has also completed the book's chapter illustrations, and with the help of graphic designer, Frank Bridges, the cover design. When Troulis decided to write a book about twin sisters, she had hoped to connect with girls on many different levels and emphasize important points. In addition to entertaining them, she wanted to remind them of how powerful they can be as women.

Troulis began writing the series in December 2000 when her own set of twins, Justin and Samantha, were just 3 years old. As an artist, she was searching for a new creative outlet; but as a mother, she wanted to write a book that her children would love. Six years later, with her mother by her side as her editor for the second time, Troulis is optimistic about the future of the series and looks forward to promoting her new book.

Troulis' first book, "Penelope and Priscilla and the Enchanted House of Whispers," is now available in paperback on Amazon and through Barnes & Noble and Borders stores.

"Penelope and Priscilla and the City of the Banished" is also available in bookstores. Reviews and excerpts from both of the books can be found at www.twinmonkeyspress.com.

Sundance School experience sticks with students

Learning center marks 30 years

Donna Turlik, above, a teacher at the Sundance School in North Plainfield, works with students combining math, language arts and social studies. The school marks its 30th anniversary this year.

By AMY S. BOBROWSKI
Staff Writer

NORTH PLAINFIELD — As Jeff Tobey wandered the halls of the Trinity Reformed Church, he noticed the small, child-sized facilities.

"I remember seeing a water fountain that was placed at the height for a little kid and the little commodes," said Tobey, who at the time was just in sixth grade. "When I was a senior in high school, I would talk to my friends about my plan of becoming a teacher for little children and starting a school in that church."

In the fall of 1977, husband and wife Jeff and Ginny Tobey, both just 25 at the time, started the Sundance School with 28 pre-school-aged children.

Before opening, the couple painted the rooms, prepared supplies and even built the playground equipment out back.

By the end of the first year, enrollment grew to 100. Now, the private learning center is celebrating 30 years and has 386 students between the ages of 2 and 9.

At Sundance, the classrooms aren't entirely split up by age groups. There aren't sections for first, second and third grade pupils. Rather, the children are placed in programs based on their developmental levels and learning styles. Additionally, parents have the option of enrolling their children in programs of different lengths, including two-day instruction to the full five days of classes.

The establishment is run similarly to a high school in that pupils in the Primary and Constellation classes — for children 5 and 9 — receive instruction from several special subject teachers.

"For a teacher this is a true joy," said Carina Bellmann, language arts coordinator. "Each teacher specializes in a subject. I spend all day teaching Language Arts. My passion is poetry and I teach that to kindergartners through third-graders. The children get the specialty of that teacher all year."

Professional musician David Berkeley, who went on to Pingry and later Harvard University, got his start at Sundance.

"Art and expression was such a big part of Sundance," he wrote in a letter to the school. "We were always doing something expressive — be it dance or painting and certainly music and plays. I remember the plays the most. I was Peter in 'Peter and the Wolf' and Jimmy Cricket in 'Pinocchio.' Sundance definitely made me comfortable on stage from as early an age as I have memory. In fact, Sundance had me singing as soon as I could speak, and singing became as natural to me as talking."

Although science and art may seem like entirely different subjects, instructors at Sundance combine the courses providing for comprehensive lessons.

After completing an experiment with cabbage in science class, the children used half-heads of the vegetable as a stamp in the art class. During another lesson, pupils created a goop-like substance in science class and later cut up the doughy, gel-like mixture to decorate another project.

While many public schools are cutting arts programs because of budget constraints, Sundance places a strong emphasis on education through the arts. The children participate in at least five performing arts shows each year including musical acts and dance performances. The school even has separate rooms reserved for drama and stage instruction.

"Jeff plays the dulcimer and harmonica and I play the guitar and violin," Ginny Tobey said. "We enjoy improvisation together. The arts are spontaneous. It's a key to communication."

Getting up on a stage and performing for peers and loved ones also aids the growth of a child's self-esteem, said Joann Merrigan, the school's stage director and mother of a former Sundance student.

"We have the ability to educate and elevate the students through the art in a unique way that makes them want to learn and grow," she said. "My daughter left the school after first grade. When she went onto her next school, people were wondering 'What is Sundance?' She had such a unique confidence for a little girl."

With such a wonderful educational experience, parents might wonder what the transition to a future school holds in store for their child.

"We have a 'What's Next?' meeting at the beginning of each year," Bellmann said. "We plan and prepare for when a student transitions. We study the curriculum at the other schools and our teachers stay in contact with the new school. Our children are overly prepared for their next school."

Students transitioning into Sundance are also accepted with open arms. "The children here are used to transitions and new things," Bellmann continued. "They'll accept that new child right away."

The school is planning a Birthday Bash in May to celebrate the anniversary and invites graduates to participate in the event. For more information, call (908) 561-5055 or visit www.sundanceschool.net.

Panthers flex muscles in tourney romp

Six winners power B-R to county crown

By DAVE ALLENA
Staff Writer

HILLSBOROUGH — If future Skyland Conference opponents weren't quite sure how strong the Bridgewater-Raritan High wrestling squad is this season, they have a lot more information following the Somerset County Tournament.

In as dominant a performance as has been seen in the event in recent years, the Panthers ran away with the team championship — their first since 1997 — by a whopping 76-point margin over two-time defending champion Watchung Hills Dec. 27.

Crowning six champions and placing 11 wrestlers overall among the top three in their respective weight classes, Bridgewater-Raritan totaled an impressive 229 points, turning the competition into its personal highlight show.

In the finals, after third-place Bound Brook won three of the first six bouts, the Panthers flaunted their upper-weight power by taking six of the final eight matches, including the last four.

Roy Dragon, who captured his third SCT title, won his heavy-weight crown in a walkover to cap the Bridgewater performance. Along the way Dan Liss, Tyler Riccio, brothers Wayne and Andrew Hampton and Drew Ives each won for the first time.

Feeling no pressure entering the tournament, the Panthers performed flawlessly to easily handle the over-matched field.

"We had a really good tournament," Head Coach Greg Evans said. "In terms of who finished where, I'd be hard-pressed to find anyone who should've finished higher than they did. We just had pleasant surprises. No surprises the other way.

"We had everyone advance to the quarterfinals but one, and I thought we wrestled well in the quarterfinals and semifinals. Then in the finals we wrestled extremely well. You definitely don't expect a point total like that, but if we wrestled to our potential the opportunity was certainly there.

"For the most part we received contributions from everyone. If a kid didn't place he picked up some bonus points somewhere. Up and down the lineup we achieved and placed where we expected to. We didn't catch any bad breaks. We won just about all the close matches. Things pretty much went our way the whole tournament.

"I didn't feel like we had any pressure on us going in because I believe pressure comes when you're trying to win something a second time and going for your third in a row. We hadn't won in almost a decade, so there wasn't any pressure on us."

At the same time, with a large group of seniors, most of them quality performers in their fourth varsity campaign, most observers tabbed the Panthers as the team to beat, and it was something they wanted to win.

"We have a senior-laden team," said Evans. "We've won a couple of district titles, but a county title had eluded us so it was nice to see this group finally win one. They've won some big matches during their time here, so this was another feather in their cap.

"It's exciting to win this. It's one of the goals we've had for the team this year, and it's nice to accomplish it."

The SCT title is something that's been on the minds of the Panthers quite a while.

"This feels very good for the team," Ives said. "We were thinking about this during the summer. Just about all of us spent a lot of time working in the off-season trying to do whatever we could with the goal of winning the county tournament, so to win feels pretty good."

In its bid to win the crown, B-R opted to push its lineup up at the top, sacrificing individual positioning for the sake of the team. As it turned out it didn't matter as Ives and Dragon, both up a weight class they weighed in at, won anyway.

And Andrew Hampton, who Evans wanted to get into the lineup at 189 pounds, rewarded that decision by winning his title as the third seed.

"One pleasant surprise was Andrew Hampton," the coach said. "He really got into the lineup because we moved Drew and Roy up, and he really made the most of it.

"We'd been tossing it around a while, but I wanted to see the results of other matches the weekend before the county tournament. We thought it was a good move for the team, but we didn't make the final decision until the seeding meeting (Dec. 26)."

In all, B-R sent eight to the Watchung Hills High 112-pounder Tommy Ross, top, is on his way to an 11-3 triumph over Bridgewater-Raritan's Ryan Radwanski in the championship round of the Somerset County Tournament. That was the lone title claimed by the Warriors, who finished a distant second to Bridgewater-Raritan in the battle for team honors.

B-R boys still need to work on offense

BRIDGEWATER — It's scary to think that after averaging 68 points for its three holiday tournament games, the Bridgewater-Raritan High boys basketball team can improve offensively.

But for Head Coach Tim Ortelli, that was the focus as the Panthers entered the New Year standing at 5-1 following their 65-34 rout of Cranford Saturday night that gave them a sweep of their games in the Vaughn Stapleton Classic at B-R.

"I think we're getting a little better," he said. "We're still inconsistent, but we're still mixing and matching. We still haven't come up with a fixed rotation yet. Other than James McNally and Andy August, this is a new team with kids getting their first varsity playing time.

"We've just got to be more consistent on offense. Our defense has been solid, and we're rebounding well, but we've got to pass the ball better and handle it better. We've also got to hit our open shots.

"We're getting open shots. We're shooting with very little defensive pressure because of the double team in the low post, but we're not hitting them. If we can start to knock some down from 15-20 feet that will really open things open. Teams will have to pick their poison, whether to stay with the double team or give us open shots."

Bridgewater-Raritan flashed some of that potential in the third quarter against Cranford. After taking a 28-18 halftime lead thanks to a strong second period (13-5), the Panthers got three-pointers from Jared Rothbard, Dave Pilla and Keith Woung-Fallon in just over a minute's time to open some daylight.

"We didn't play very well in the first quarter, but then we had a three-minute stretch in the second quarter where we started to put things together and outscored Cranford 11-1," Ortelli said. "That carried over and we played a very solid second half."

It was the third straight strong second-half performance by the Panthers, who won their fifth in a row, in the tournament.

"I don't know if there is any one reason for it," Ortelli said. "In the first game against Marlboro, we had 49 points at halftime. They just couldn't stop us. Against Piscataway, after turning the ball over eight times in the second quarter, we did a better job with that. Against Cranford we finally hit some open shots."

McNally, who's led B-R in scoring in all six games, dropped in 23 against the Cougars to finish as the only player in double figures. Woung-Fallon and Rothbard connected on three treys apiece to close with nine points apiece, while August added eight.

Perfect Spartans roll to sixth win

BRIDGEWATER — It's not often a wakeup call comes from a game you're not involved in, but Mike Frauenheim believes that was the case for his Immaculata High boys.

Even with Immaculata sporting an unbeaten record entering its third game of the Vaughn Stapleton Classic, the Spartans' head coach wasn't entirely pleased with the product displayed on the court.

That all changed when Immaculata saw the challenge its biggest league rival, Bridgewater-Raritan, had gotten Dec. 28 from Piscataway in a 51-39 battle.

And what it led to was an outstanding practice the next day and then a shut-down defensive performance Saturday afternoon as the Spartans raced to a 16-2 start, built a 31-point lead after three quarters finished with a convincing 54-29 triumph over the Chiefs at B-R High.

"We'd been going through the motions for the first couple of weeks but that (Bridgewater-Piscataway) game got the kids' attention," Frauenheim said. "Our goal was to get into the New Year undefeated. We did that, but we didn't play that well."

"Against Piscataway we played our best game of the year. Piscataway is young, but they're very talented. I think that's a very good team. I think the level of competition got our kids focused."

"I don't know if that's good or bad. When they see the competition out there they get challenged, but at the same time when they play a team we should beat the focus hasn't always been there. That's a time when you lose a game you shouldn't."

Immaculata, which improved to 6-0, wasted no time in assuming command with its big first quarter but Frauenheim saw the ground-work laid the previous day.

"I saw it in practice," he said. "As a team there was a lot of intensity. They understood the urgency of what we needed to do. At the start of the game I could see it in their eyes. Right from the start we did everything well. We passed the ball, we defended and we rebounded."

With top scorer Brian Kerwin playing with a fever and held to nine points, the Spartans used a balanced effort against the Chiefs as Jeff Cullinan led the way with 11 points, Jason Cimino followed with 10 and Tim Sanderson had eight.

IMMACULATA SCORING
Cimino 1-2-2 10, Kerwin 3-1-0 9, Fied 3-0-6, Fargus 1-0-2, Cullinan 4-3-11, Sanderson 4-0-6, Fisher 2-0-4, Lubreski 2-0-4 Totals: 29-3-5-54

Piscataway 2 9 4 14 — 29
Immaculata 16 13 17 8 — 54

Immaculata 57, Marlboro 32 — Thursday's game was decided by halftime as the Spartans built a 20-8 lead through eight minutes and opened a 34-14 advantage by halftime in, easily handling Marlboro (2-4). Kerwin totaled a game-high 19 points while Cullinan turned in the best all-around performance with 18 points, nine rebounds and five blocked shots.

Immaculata 54, East Brunswick 42 — Kerwin dropped in a game-high 17 points while Cullinan finished with 15, including a 7-for-7 effort from the foul line, as the Spartans dumped East Brunswick Dec. 27.

Raritan children warm to cold-blooded creatures

By ALLISON ELYSE GUALTIERI
Staff Writer

RARITAN — Dominic Rizzo stuck Spidey the tree frog on his head, both to make his audience of children from the John F. Kennedy School laugh, and to teach them something, that tree frogs have sticky feet.

It was just one of the things the pupils learned from Rizzo, who gave three assemblies to the school last week, showing and telling about some of the scaly creatures he cares for as a professional wildlife educator. "When the snow comes — and I hope it comes — and you go outside to play, the temperature outside is maybe 20 degrees, but we're 98.6 degrees. Do you know what a lizard is?" he said. "Frozen."

Lizards, like Shakespeare, the bearded dragon from Australia, depend on the sun's warmth for their own, Rizzo explained.

"He's a desert animal. He likes it really hot, 110 degrees," Rizzo said.

Though Rizzo said that lizards like Shakespeare make great pets, 8-year-old Augie Garcia said that he wanted to add a snake to his menagerie, which includes two birds and two pets.

Like the two corn snakes Rizzo showed off, Sherbet and Moby, who are a female and male pair of 13-year-old albino corn snakes. Corn snakes are constrictors, not poisonous snakes, and are endangered in New Jersey.

Butterscotch, a 3-year-old male python, also amazed the children. Rizzo called up five students and even a teacher to grab hold, as he stretched the constrictor out to his full 11-foot length. Butterscotch, who gets his name from his bright yellow coloring, is native to southeast Asia. The python drew the biggest gasps from the audience, but King, the alligator snapping turtle, earned a few oohs and aahs of his own. King could take off a finger, said Rizzo. It's a good thing he, like most alligator snapping turtles, is lazy.

"They don't like to hunt, they like the food to come to them. They like delivery," Rizzo said, showing students how turtles like King inflate their tongues to use as fishing lures.

Dominic Rizzo shows off Butterscotch, and 11-foot python, with some help from pupils and third-grade teacher Dorothy Bogda at John F. Kennedy School in Raritan last week.
