Ms. Ness heads to Washington

Dunellen student wins national VFW Patriot's Pen essay contest

The VFW and its Ladies Auxiliary have chosen New Jersey 8th grade student Sarah Van Ness of Dunellen as the first-place winner of the veterans organization's annual Patriot's Pen essay contest.

Sponsored by VFW Post 5479 and Ladies Auxiliary in Dunellen, Sarah will receive a $10,000 U.S. savings bond for her award-winning essay based on the theme, "Citizenship in America," during the VFW/Ladies Auxiliary's annual Community Service Conference, which is held annually the first week of March in Washington, D.C.

The youth-essay program, which is endorsed by the National Association of Secondary School Principals, is a nationwide competition that gives students in grades 6, 7 and 8 the opportunity to write a 300-400 word essay based on an annual patriotic theme. Annually, more than 115,000 students participate in the scholarship contest, which just finished its 12th year.

The Tri-Boro Memorial Post #5479 chose five essays written by Lincoln Middle School students in grades 6th-8th to compete at the county level. On Jan. 14, at the District Eight Veterans of Foreign Wars and its Ladies Auxiliary's Annual Patriot's Pen Essay Awards Program, Sarah's essay was awarded first place in Middlesex County by the District Eight VFW. Her essay was sent to the New Jersey VFW to compete on the state level.

On Feb. 17, at the state VFW awards program, it was announced that not only was Sarah's essay awarded first place in New Jersey, but it was chosen by the National VFW to become the National Winner. There were approximately 115,000 essays submitted across the country.

As part of her award, Sarah will get a persona; tour guide provided by the National VFW to see the Loan paves way for project

The Middlesex County Board of Chosen Freeholders voted March 1 to authorize a $3 million loan to complete construction on the Heldrich Hotel and Conference Center in downtown New Brunswick.

The loan to the projects is through the Middlesex County Improvement Authority, which owns the conference center. The county became a bondholder for the project; Devco, the New Brunswick Development Corp., is the project development entity.

The total project budget was $120. In 2005 the MCIA, using the county's AAA bond rating, issued $70,045,000 in bonds to finance a portion of the construction costs. The project also received funding from the New Jersey Casino Reinvestment Development Authority and other public and private funding sources.

city. Sarah will also take part in the annual VFW Community Service Awards Banquet where she will be awarded her savings bond.

Her essay:

"Citizenship in America"

Sarah Van Ness

New Jersey

"We the people of the United States" is the first line of our Constitution. This famous document not only outlines the rights and restrictions of our government but through the words "We the people," explains that the government could not exist without support from the people it governs. Supporting and participating in the government and the community is practicing good citizenship and keeping our country strong and prosperous.

Our government was created by the people, for the people and now 230 years after its birth it continues to be run by its citizens. We vote to elect our leaders. We can sign petitions and write letters to try and change laws. We can have a say in what goes on in our government. In order for our government to be strong and successful, the citizens of our country must play an active part. As a citizen of this country and your state and town, it is important to contribute to the governments that rule over you, in order to do this you have to stay informed. Staying informed helps you make smart decisions when it comes to electing leaders. It also helps protect your rights and the rights of others. Knowing what is going on in the government and acting on that knowledge is important in being a good citizen.

Staying informed and being active in our government are not the only methods of demonstrating good citizenship. Improving life in your community is also an important aspect of citizenship. Participating in town clean-ups, donating to charity, working at a homeless shelter, and volunteering in any other activities that promote the general welfare enrich life in the community. Taking the initiative and lending a helping hand to those in need is important to society. It improves the town, city or state by building a better quality of life and strengthening the bonds between the people. When everyone works together to make life better for other people and not just for themselves it makes the town a better place for all.

People that exercise good citizenship are the nails of our country; they hold it together. Without those people our government would fall apart. Take the initiative and be a nail of our nation. Be a good citizen and always live out the first words of our constitution, "We the People."

Loan

Budget increases led to the need for an additional $3 million to complete the project as it was originally designed. A ribbon-cutting ceremony was held March 1 and a number of other events are scheduled to be held at the center through the month.

The center will pay back the loan with interest plus an administrative fee, so there is no cost to county taxpayers.

According to Freeholder Director David Crabel, the county loan made good business sense for the county at large.

"The Heldrich Hotel and Conference Center will serve as a fine example of how to successfully bring commercial, residential and academic space under one roof," he said. "It will be a big draw and popular destination for corporate, student and individual visitors to New Brunswick. It will serve as an economic boost for the area."

Crabel said the county Department of Workforce Development worked closely with the center's management team to fill hundreds of jobs with local residents.

"More jobs and more visitors in the center of New Brunswick is good news for city and county residents," he said. "The center will generate $1 million annually in tax revenues and identifies commercial growth locally and in the county."

The nine-story, 275,000 square foot center includes 250 hotel rooms and suites, a full-service restaurant and lounge, a 500-seat ballroom, a health club, pool and spa and about 7,800 square feet of retail space with street access.

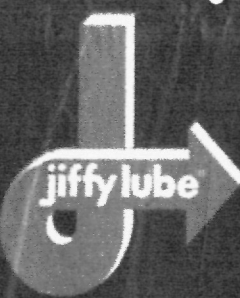

The facility also includes 50,000 square feet of conference space, including an 86-seat amphitheater and meeting breakout rooms, and 30,000 square feet of office and instructional space.

Heather Jacoby, a Bridgewater resident and student at the University of New Haven, rides along with officer Darrin DiPalma of the Somerville Police Department last month. Jacoby is fulfilling her criminal justice major internship requirements through the department.

Borough's finest offer experience

By ALLISON ELYSE GUALTIERI
Staff Writer

SOMERVILLE — Heather Jacoby is getting to see, firsthand, what life is like behind the badge.

A criminal justice major at the University of New Haven, Jacoby is spending 150 hours at the Somerville Police Station, shadowing officers and dispatchers to learn the ins and outs of the job.

"It's different. You watch the shows on TV and get one idea of what police work is like, but then you see it firsthand," she said.

The Bridgewater resident is participating in the department's internship program. While she's not sure she wants to become a cop — "I'm not 100 percent sure yet, but it's high up there," she said — she's getting to do a lot more than make copies and get coffee.

"It's fun, because it's hands-on. A lot of my friends who are doing internships don't get to do much, a lot of paper-work," she said.

So far, she's gone on a number of motor vehicle stops, sat behind the dispatch desk, and gotten to experience what she's learned about in her classes.

"This morning, when I came in, I sat down there (in dispatch) for awhile. It was pretty hectic," she said.

She has even gotten to see a less-pleasant side of the job, when she went on an untended death call for an elderly gentleman.

"It was sad, the daughters were there," she said.

Somerville, which has offered the program for many years, accepts two interns at a time and works with colleges and universities to help students get the internships they need to complete their courses of study.

"We allow their students to participate in the ride-along program so that they can experience what we do and apply it to their studies," said Lt. George Fazio, who heads up the program in the department.

Interns generally spend anywhere from 30 to 250 hours at the department, depending on the requirements of their schools, and are assigned to an officer for the day while they are there. They create their own schedules, Fazio said, and typically come in a few days every week.

"It's a good program, they get to do a lot of things and interact with the officers," he said, noting that interns get to shadow officers, spend time with dispatchers, and experience the detective bureau.

While interns are not allowed on the overnight shift — they must clock in after 8 a.m. and out before midnight — they do get to experience the wide array of what police officers do.

"We like to get them involved. They stay in the background. They don't say anything, but they ask the officers questions after it's over," said Fazio.

Jacoby said that she stays in the police car on stops, and listens in over the officer's voice recorder.

"We tell them to listen to the officer. The officer is not going to get them in harm's way," Fazio said.

Tails and scales never seem to fail

4-H club brightens seniors' Sundays

BRIDGEWATER — Sundays can be a little lonely for Rita Callahan.

"My family can't visit me on Sunday," said Callahan who lives at Bridgeway Senior Health Center on Route 28. "It can get a little lonely around here."

But the last Sunday of the month is the one she looks forward to. That's when members of the 4-H Pet Therapy Club bring their beloved animals to visit with the senior citizens.

"Oh, I love when they come here," she said. "I love animals."

Some of the animals are furry, some have scales, but they all have one thing in common: They raise the spirits of the residents at the complex.

On Feb. 25, Callahan spent part of her afternoon petting and talking to Fruity, a 13-year-old eastern box turtle.

"This turtle is just so friendly," Callahan said. "She's the first one I ever saw that let you pet her and doesn't go back into her shell."

Fruity belongs to Bridgewater resident Anita Haley, organizer of the Pet Therapy Club. The club, which has about 15 members, ages 8 to 17, makes visits to nursing homes, senior centers and hospital to allow others to interact with their pets. They make monthly visits to Bridgeway and recently visited to the V.A. Hospital in Lyons.

"They (senior citizens) like to pet the furry animals," said Bryan Clare, the owner of Quest, an Alaskan Malamute. "Quest likes to come out and meet all the other animals."

President of the club, Grace Rosinski, of Somerville, had her cat Josie in tow for the visit to Bridgeway.

"They're so happy to see the animals," she said. "The residents here can't have their own pets here, so a lot of them tell us stories about their old pets. Some people cry because they miss their pets, but one woman gave us advice on how to care for a dog."

Rita Philpott, activities director at the center, said it isn't just the pets that brighten the days of the seniors.

"They (residents of Bridgeway) see the liveliness of both the animals and the youth," she said. "What we have is both a trans-generational and a sensory experience. They always ask when the pets are coming again. It provides a positive sense of anticipation for them."

"We all need something to look forward to no matter how old we are," Haley added.

The visits also provide a valuable experience for the children and their pets.

"It's good for the kids to visit the older generation, especially if they don't have grandparents nearby," said Deirdre Rosinski, owner of Abby, a Rawhide Rescue mutt in training. "And it's good for the animals. It helps Abby how to learn to be around a lot of people and other animals."

For Leah Flynn, who has lived at the facility for 20 years and uses a wheelchair like many residents, said the afternoons with the pets take her mind of her own misfortunes.

"It's a nice change of pace," she said. "I can't do too much or I'd fall over, but I can pet a dog or cat. The dogs take to you right away. They love to be petted."

For Herb Arnold, a resident of The Chelsea in Warren, the pets are a source of inspiration.

"I do sketches of the animals," said Arnold, whose wife is at Bridgeway. "I visit her here and come see the dogs. My place is full of drawings."

"This turtle is just so friendly. She's the first one I ever saw that let you pet her and doesn't go back into her shell."

Airbrush techniques to be demonstrated

BEDMINSTER —

Renowned portrait artist Peter Ambush will conduct a free demonstration of airbrush techniques in portrait artistry 7 p.m. Wednesday, March 14 at the Clarence Dillon Public Library, 2336 Lamington Road, located just off Route 206.

Ambush has used airbrushing to create some of the 400-plus portraits of television, screen and stage stars he has drawn. Many of those portraits are on display at the library now through the end of March.

Ambush will show art enthusiasts the precise technique he uses when airbrushing a portrait. According to the artist, airbrushing can be used to paint on multimedia board as well as murals, T-shirts, posters, and even fingernails. The technique, he says, has become popular in recent years but has actually been around since the 1940s, and artists have used it since that time.

During the demonstration, Ambush will show how to start an airbrushing project and the skill involved in mastering the airbrush.

For the most part, the artist uses black India ink in his airbrush, and gets it onto the canvas through a brush powered by air pressure.

Ambush points out that an entire piece can be done with the airbrush, or airbrushing could be one element in a project, combined with graphite, colored pencil, and watercolor. He teaches a class in airbrushing at du Cret School of the Arts in Plainfield.

Ambush, who grew up in Frederick, Maryland, earned a bachelor's degree in fine arts at the Maryland Institute College of Art, specializing in illustration and graphic design. He also studied at du Cret School of the Arts in Plainfield, where he now teaches.

Preregistration is required for the free airbrushing demonstration.

To preregister or for more information, call the library at (908) 234-2325.

Opinion

Let's be cautious with spraying aerial pesticides

By Michele S. Byers

For most people, the idea of spraying pesticides from airplanes flying over residential neighborhoods simply doesn't seem like a good idea. History is littered with examples of supposedly safe chemicals that turned out to be anything but safe, so why not err on the side of caution?

The State recently considered the use of aerial spraying of the pesticide dimilin to control the nuisance gypsy moth caterpillar population on state and private lands in forested residential areas of Atlantic, Burlington, Cape May and Ocean Counties. That would have overturned a 20-year old ban on aerial spraying of dimilin in populated areas. Thanks to the environmental community, New Jersey opted not to use this dangerous chemical.

In infants, dimilin has been shown to reduce the level of oxygen in the bloodstream, causing "blue baby syndrome." It also breaks down into a probable human carcinogen.

Dimilin is toxic enough that the federal government advises not to spray it at times when children are most likely to be in the area. Unfortunately, short of a full-scale evacuation, there's no way to ensure this recommended standard can be met in the residential areas. Aerial spraying usually occurs in early morning, when winds are light and people are out and about commuting. Even during school hours, young children are home, others are on school grounds adjacent to forest patches and accidents happen.

Dimilin is also a specifically poor choice for use in the Pinelands. It breaks down best in alkaline water and soils. The high soil acidity in the Pinelands delays chemical breakdown for up to two years, posing a great risk to all leaf-eating insects in the food chain for far longer than the intended purpose.

That risk comes from dimilin's overall impact on the ecosystem. Because it's such a broad-based pesticide, using dimilin is a little like using a bazooka to kill a bug. The target will die, but so will a great many other critters in the area. Dimilin's extreme toxicity for aquatic insects and crustaceans like the well-known and eaten blue-claw crab is one reason it's rated as a "restricted use" chemical by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Some scientists even believe spraying dimilin may actually prolong the natural cycle of rising and falling gypsy moth populations, because it also kills the critters that naturally prey on gypsy moth caterpillars. Even if that theory isn't yet proven to everyone's satisfaction, it's difficult to make the case that the short-term reduction of gypsy moths outweighs the longer-term damage done to other areas of highly interdependent local ecosystems.

For all of these reasons, gypsy moth control measures since 1985 have followed an integrated approach that includes use of a biological pesticide (rather than chemical) that isn't toxic to people or any insects other than butterflies and moths. The New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection made the right call in keeping the ban on aerial spraying of dimilin in place.

This is also another example of what concerned citizens can do by raising their voices. There are many issues before state agencies where grassroots citizen involvement can make a big difference for public health and safety. You can make a difference!

Should the government require girls to be vaccinated against HPV (human papillomavirus)?

"I don't think so, because I know some people have something against vaccination. It's a new vaccine, and they don't know the long-term effects. It's also a personal choice, because HPV is related to sexual activity."

"Right now, I don't think so. I think there's a real gray area on the border of human rights and the right to choose."

"No, I have a problem with mandated vaccinations. There's a reason New Jersey has one of the highest rates of autism in the country, and I think vaccination is a reason for that. I also think the parents should decide; the parents should have a choice."

Letters to the Editor

March is Red Cross Month

To The Editor:

When neighbors help neighbors in emergencies, it's something to celebrate. That is why every U.S. president since Franklin D. Roosevelt has declared March as Red Cross Month.

The Greater Somerset County Red Cross has served this community well for 90 years. It is easy to overlook the fact that its services are performed largely by volunteers and are supported through the generosity of people right here in Somerset County.

Thanks to their commitment, 70 local families have received critical help just in the past year when disasters, including home fires, have struck. Some 12,521 residents and employees received vital disaster preparedness information. Our Medical Transportation Program provided 2,624 rides to the elderly and disabled. Our community is a safer place because 11,308 of our neighbors have received Red Cross training in life-saving skills like first aid, CPR, and water safety. And that's only the beginning.

What makes these achievements worth celebrating is that each is truly a gift given by a member of this community. The Red Cross is nothing more, and nothing less, than the goodwill of our neighbors, coming together in one place.

A great way to celebrate March is Red Cross Month is to contact us at (908) 725-2217 and find out how you can get involved.

Help revive Raritan's Chamber of Commerce

To The Editor:

As liaison to the Raritan Borough Chamber of Commerce, I would like to invite each and every business owner, resident, and volunteer to attend the Raritan Chamber meeting, which will be held March 20 at 7 p.m. at Borough Hall.

For the borough it is imperative that Raritan have an active Chamber of Commerce to continue to receive Somerset County Economic Development Program Grants. Somerset County has informed us that before grant money is distributed, municipalities must have an active Chamber of Commerce. Raritan Borough has received hundreds of thousands of dollars in grants to rebuild Somerset Street, and roads interconnecting the train station with downtown, namely Thompson, and Anderson Streets.

Also the Economic Development Grant Program also funded the 50 percent matching facade and canopy program that many Somerset Street businesses utilized. The physical transformation of the Somerset Street area has been dramatic and made without the imposition of a special tax or assessment. To continue our progress, we need your help.

My goal is to revive the Chamber once again. In the past, there were some very dedicated members that we should all thank:

Hope Venerus, Gaetano Izzo, Ray Tropiano, Lou Filiano, Scott Lowery, Mike Phillips, and many more. Some new ideas I have had is to put together a coupon/advertisement book that would list interested borough businesses; it would also contain some history about our town, and would be distributed to all new residents. Other possible interest is to bring back the borough street fair, also a monthly block party in the summer months that would consist of businesses setting up along Main Street and inviting our residents to mingle in our business district and see what our businesses have to offer our town, which would include a DJ or live music. With this in mind we will try to increase patrons and add visibility for our business district, and to bring positive results to our community.

I would also like to thank The Reporter for giving me the opportunity to express my opinions in their paper, so I can reach out to the residents and our community. Also a thank you to our community for the grants we have received to make Raritan a better place to live. The Chamber will also be looking for new ideas from you the business owner, and residents. Again hope to see you all.

Thank you.

Rumson ousts SHS girls

Hey, it was just an eight-point game at halftime.

For a team trying to come from behind, that's not too overwhelming — under most circumstances. But in this case, Somerville High not only trailed by eight, the Pioneers also had scored a grand total of eight points.

And there was little promise things were going to get a whole lot better after the intermission Tuesday night at Bridgewater-Raritan High.

"Was there ever a point when I felt we could take over the lead and get it going?" was SHS Head Coach Corby Swan's rhetorical question. "To be honest with you, against a defense like that, I'd be lying if I said yes."

The only time the situation got much better for the fourth-seeded Pioneers was after Rumson Fair-Haven Head Coach George Sourlis took out his starting group with less than two minutes remaining, and by then it was too late to make a difference.

Somerville quickly converted three straight turnovers into the game's last eight points, which only served to make the final 38-30 tally look a heck of a lot closer than the Central Jersey Group 2 tournament championship clash really was.

Second-seeded Rumson-Fair Haven (25-4), which claimed its seventh successive section crown and is seeking a second straight group title, threw a devastatingly mobile, shifting man-to-man defense at the Pioneers (20-6), who initially hurt themselves with repeated turnovers as they fell behind 9-0.

SHS, appearing in its first section final since 1994, then settled down nicely, committing a mere three turnovers following the opening quarter. But the Pioneers never could solve the Bulldogs' impenetrable defense.

Somerville 6-foot senior Caity Laub, a 1000-point-plus career scorer and among the top overall players in Somerset County, was limited to 11 points, shooting 2 for 13 from the floor including three blocked attempts by 6-0 sophomore Kate Miller.

She swished a pull-up jumper for the Pioneers' first points, then didn't hit another shot until sinking a three-pointer off a turnover with 42 seconds left in the game.

SOMERVILLE GIRLS BASKETBALL

Sophomore Lindsay Callander also had 11, including two straight third-period treys which helped SHS keep its hopes alive briefly.

"Like everyone had told me, their defense is their staple," said Swan. "Everything I saw on tape, I saw here tonight. Their half-court defense is so good, they don't even feel the need to press. I've never seen a swarming defense that good."

"They'll let you do this, but they won't let you do this, this, or this. They're not giving you a post-up, they're not giving you the drive down the middle, which is what Caity had been able to do so often this year. There's no space against Rumson — you're not going to do it."

Helped by Rumson's 1-for-10 shooting in the second stanza, the Pioneers managed to stay in contention and faced only a 16-8 half-time deficit.

"Being down eight against that defense is like 18 — it really is," said Swan. "You're not going to get any easy baskets. You're going to work for everything you get. The kids get a little winded, and you have a short bench at this point in the season anyway. So it's tough. There's a reason they've won this thing seven years in a row."

Callander's two treys and a Laub foul shot still had SHS within 23-15 midway through the third quarter but senior guard Marissa LeCardi, Rumson's three-point gunner extraordinaire, then canned two treys in a 46-second span for a 29-15 advantage. The Pioneers never got closer than 13 again until the final 1:14.

SHS 56, Shore 51 — Near-flawless free-throw shooting and clutch buckets by Laub and Dana Bradley in crunch time made the difference March 2 as the host Pioneers rallied from a six-point deficit to knock off ninth-seeded Shore Regional (14-14) in the section semifinal round.

Shannon Grunwald paced the Pioneers with 20 points, 16 following halftime. Laub had 18 points (6 for 12 from the field, 6 for 7 from the line) along with five rebounds and three steals and Bradley hauled in 11 boards.

Nettles returns for 5th season

The production numbers accumulated by Jeff Nettles during his tenure with the Somerset Patriots clearly show he has power. Staying power, too.

In a league where personnel comes and goes as frequently as airliners at Newark Liberty International, Nettles will become the first individual to play five seasons with the independent Atlantic League of Professional Baseball club after re-signing with Somerset last week.

The 28-year-old Nettles, who's been working as an instructor at the Jack Cust Baseball Academy in Flemington since last fall and is living in Glen Gardner, is looking forward to another campaign with the Patriots, who've won a pair of ALPB championships with him at third base and in the middle of the batting order.

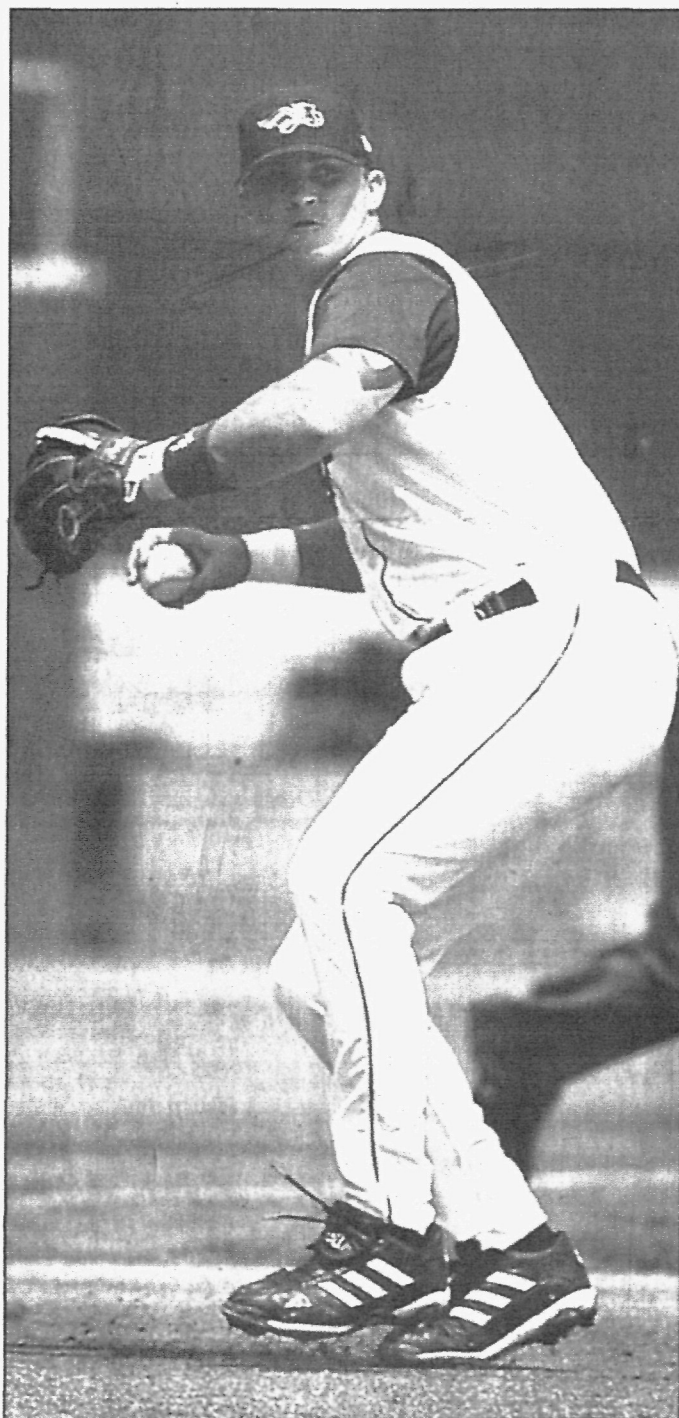

"I'm definitely ready to go," he said. "I have the itch to play again. I've been teaching the last few months and I'm ready to get back into it. Just seeing some baseball on TV again, it gets you excited about playing."

Nettles, a native Californian who's been an ALPB All-Star third baseman every year, is the Patriots' career leader in runs batted in with 317 and is second in home runs with 84, games played (477), at-bats (1751), hits (502) and doubles (110).

He was enjoying a strong 2006 campaign until he suffered a broken right thumb Aug. 25 when struck by a pitch, forcing him to miss the final four weeks of the season. He still finished the year third in the ALPB in homers with 21 and fourth in slugging percentage (.509). In 101 games he batted .277 with 106 hits, 26 doubles and 69 RBI.

He also had by far his steadiest defensive showing last year, posting a .956 fielding percentage while making just 14 errors.

"The thumb feels good," said Nettles, who wore a cast for six weeks. "I rehabbed it and it feels strong. Actually,

GEORGE PACCIELLO/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Third baseman Jeff Nettles, who again was among the Atlantic League of Professional Baseball's home-run leaders in 2006, will be back for his fifth season with the Somerset Patriots.

when I broke it I'd just been on the phone with a Mexican team about playing winter ball. But I stayed up here (he'd been living in Tennessee) this winter and figured if nothing happened for me during the off-season, I'd come back to the Patriots."

If Ryan Radmanovich returns this season, he'll join Nettles as another fifth-year Patriot. The rightfielder had been hoping to hook up with an overseas league.

In 2005, Nettles (who was drafted by the New York Yankees in 1998) and Radmanovich each ripped a team-record 28 homers. The righthanded-swinging Nettles also was among the league leaders that year with 99 RBI and 36 doubles, batted .265, delivered 133 hits and missed just four games while helping Somerset claim its third ALPB title.

Nettles, whose father Craig had a 22-year major league career, half of it with the Yankees, hit a career-high .319 in 2004 and totaled 22 homers, 23 doubles, 93 RBI and 145 hits in 123 games.

In 2003, his first year with the Pats, he hit .286 with 13 homers, 25 doubles and 56 RBI in 117 games, and then was named "Most Valuable Player" of the league championship series when he hit .450 with a homer and five RBI as the Pats took the title.

Nettles is surrounded by plenty of familiar faces at the Cust Academy. Also working there are two of his 2006 teammates, Travis Anderson and Immaculata High graduate Tony Gsell, along with former Patriot pitchers Justin Jensen and Chris Zallie and Somerset coach Ben Fonseca.

After its annual late-April spring training session in Florida, Somerset's season begins Friday, May 4 against Newark at Commerce Bank Park in Bridgewater.

Panthers' Dragon takes third in state

ATLANTIC CITY — Roy Dragon, Tyler Riccio and Brendan Ard all experienced the thrill of wrestling Sunday at Boardwalk Hall.

Unfortunately, the three area standouts took part in the morning session when the also-ran honors were determined in the consolation bouts. But while emotions ran the gamut during the course of the weekend at the NJSIAA state tournament, none of trio admitted to suffering a big disappointment with his finish.

Bridgewater-Raritan High senior Dragon, who entered as the top seed at 215 pounds, fell short of his goal of claiming the gold medal after placing the previous three years. He finished third, while Watchung Hills sophomore Ard also came home with a bronze for taking third at 160.

Riccio, Dragon's cousin and B-R classmate, dropped a pair of one-point decisions in his final two bouts and had to settle for sixth place at 145.

Of the seven area wrestlers to qualify for the state tourney, Dragon had the best shot to go the distance but a four-overtime loss in the semifinals meant he had to chase what was left.

"That's always the hardest part, coming back from a loss, especially in the state tournament," he said. "It's such a grueling tournament, but I had a lot of support with my family and friends and I wouldn't have just let myself down if I'd gone back out there and lost again."

"It's a lot better to go out winning than with a loss, but I would've loved to have won a state championship. That was my goal. It was disappointing I didn't attain my goal, but I still had a successful season."

"I wrestled very well, and I'm not going to go around pouting because I did didn't win a state championship because there have been a lot of great wrestlers who haven't, either."

After reaching the semifinals with a pair of first-period falls, Dragon ran into trouble in the person of Southern Regional sophomore Glenn Carson, who ended up second.

Dragon scored the first points on a takedown but couldn't get in on Carson the rest of the way, managing only a pair of escapes in the second period and then one in each of the second and third extra 30-second periods. In the fourth OT, however, Dragon failed to get out from his defensive position, giving Carson the decisive point in a 7-6 decision.

STATE WRESTLING TOURNAMENT

"He's very good," said Dragon. "He's good on his feet. He stays in good position, and he takes advantage of your mistakes. I made a couple of them. I hadn't wrestled him before, but I knew he was a good athlete and a good wrestler."

"It was the toughest match I've had. I took him down early but couldn't get any offense going after that. I wasn't as conditioned as I should've been. I hadn't had a lot of tough matches this year because there aren't a lot of good 215-pounders, and I should've been more prepared with practice."

Dragon, who finished the season with a 41-2 record, rebounded from his loss to Carson in the wrestlingback semifinals by trimming Kenny Amponsa of Hightstown 9-2. That earned him a chance at third, and he took care of business with a 4-0 decision over George Kocher of Bergen Catholic.

Riccio carried a 32-2 mark into the tournament and opened with decisions in the pre-quarterfinals and quarterfinals before facing eventual runnerup Luke Lanno of Southern in the quarters. Lanno built a 6-0 lead in the third period before posting a 5-21 fall.

"I thought I wrestled tough," said Riccio, "but the kid was very good and I couldn't get any offense going. He's by far the best kid I wrestled this year. It was 6-0 and I had to try something. I went for a throw, but he caught me and pinned me."

With little rest between bouts, Riccio had to go against Jackson's Sean Byrnes and had nothing in the tank in a 1-0 setback. Coming back Sunday, he met Jackson Brady of Bergen Catholic for fifth place in rematch of their quarterfinal bout, which Riccio won 3-2. This time Brady prevailed 3-2.

"I wrestled (the wrestlingback semifinal) shortly after the semifinal and I couldn't do anything," he said. "I shouldn't have lost that one and I shouldn't have lost the last one. I'd beaten that kid earlier, and but he got a controversial

"I'm satisfied with sixth place, but I could've placed higher. Those last two matches were disappointing but I still got a medal, which is what I wanted to do. I had a successful season. I had more pressure on me this year to place because it's my last year, and I was able to do it."

Ard put together an impressive performance after entering the tourney with what amounted to the 12th seed. He opened up with a victory over the sixth seed but was then sent to the wrestlingbacks with a 4-1 loss to Jackson's unseeded Ken Carney, who finished as the champion.

"Carney was very strong, a very experienced wrestler, something I didn't have a lot of," said Ard. "He was hard to score on. It was a hard loss. He's a state champ now, and he's made a name for himself. I wish I had a little more offense, but I learned a lot from the loss and it's going to help me down the line."

To reach the consolation bout for third place, Ard had to win three times and did that with three decisions, the third a 5-1 victory over top-seeded John Mangini of Hillsborough. A year ago Mangini took second at 152 and he'd beaten Ard 15-2 in the Somerset County Tournament final in late December.

"Once you get down to the state tournament it doesn't matter who has what seed," Ard said of his verdict over Mangini. "It's a matter of who wrestles better and who wants it more."

Facing eighth-seeded Dan Zotollo of Paramus for third place Sunday, Ard took an 8-2 decision to close out his campaign with a 37-3 record.

"It feels pretty nice to finish third," he said. "It's a big surprise when you get third, but that was my goal. I wanted to get top-three. Winning is always the best, but third is a nice accomplishment."

"I wrestled just about the best I could. I don't think I could've wrestled any better. After I lost that match (in the quarters) I walked over to the corner and told myself the tournament wasn't over. It was a different tournament and I was wrestling for third. I'm always aware that at any point in a match I can lose, but I kept on going because I knew I could win the match."

'Capt. Kidd' comes calling in Middlesex

Every Friday afternoon J.T. McMillen of Dunellen changes his name to Capt. Kidd.

He is a Grade 1 student at Rutgers Preparatory School in Somerset and a member of the Pirate Club, one of 12 clubs that pupils in Grades 1-4 can join.

"I love ships and sea journals, dressing like a pirate and learning about old sea outlaws," J.T. said.

Clubs are a standing tradition at Rutgers Prep; they meet every Friday for six weeks in winter. For the final meeting all students in Grades 1-4 get together to share what they have done in their respective clubs.

"We keep the tried-and-true activities that children seem to look forward to every year," according to Kathie Rusyn, principal of the Lower School at Rutgers Prep. "We also add new clubs as interests arise."

An exhibit highlighting the role that Perth Amboy played in colonial legal history is on display at the Middlesex County Courthouse in downtown New Brunswick.

Perth Amboy was named the capital of colonial East Jersey in 1684 and a co-capital of colonial New Jersey in 1702. That city was also the seat of Middlesex County prior to the War of Independence.

You can see this permanent exhibit any time the courthouse is open. The courthouse is at John F. Kennedy Square, 55 Paterson St., about one block from George Street.

Funding for the exhibit is by a grant from the Middlesex County Cultural and Heritage Commission.
